The Merits of Seale's Shirts
during more than 60 years
unmistakably voiced.

BELOW IS AN EXTRACT FROM A LETTER RECENTLY RECEIVED:

Messrs. E. & W. Seale, 97 and 98 Grafton street, Dublin. Wilts.

Dear Sirs,—I have not been in Ireland for many years, not I think since 1907, and I do not know what may have happened in Dublin since then.

I want some new shirts and should like to get them from you if your firm is still in existence. I will send you a shirt to act as pattern and will ask you to make me six new shirts of the same quality.

When I went up as a youth to Oxford in 1856, 65 years ago, you made my shirts for me, and I have had shirts from you on several occasions since that date.

I am wearing one of yours at the present moment, and I have preferred your shirts to those which I have had from any other maker.

I am now 83 years of age, so it is probable this is the last order which I shall ever give.

I am, Very faithfully yours,

EXHIBITION OF IRISH GOODS.

At the Council meeting of the Dublin Industrial Development Association it was stated that satisfactory progress was being made with the fitting up of the premises, 40 Upper Sackville street, where the Association is shortly opening a permanent exhibition for the display of Irish goods of all classes. Space is now being allotted. Goods of all kinds, from motor tractors to lace, foodstuffs, furniture, and paper, will be displayed, and it is intended to make the showrooms a miniature exhibition of everything Ireland produces.

The Director of the Royal Dublin Society wrote inviting the assistance of the Council in organising a trades exhibition of Irish manufactures at Ballsbridge. The acceptance of the invitation to co-operate was unanimously approved.

SHANKAT ALI'S DEFENCE.

KARACHI, Saturday.

At to-day's resumption of the trial of the Ali brothers, which is proceeding here, Shankat Ali was the last of the accused to address the jury. He declared that he was perfectly willing to make friends with Englishmen so long as they did not oppress his religion and country. He said that he personally was not responsible for distributing seductive leaflets to the troops, but the propaganda of the Khalifat Committee was such that they would distribute them to every Indian soldier, even if ten thousand majors and colonels were posted to guard them. He and his companions were non-violent Co-Operators, but if the doctrine of non-violence had failed by the 31st December, then, if circumstances permitted, they might resort to violence. The present prosecution would not serve the Government's purpose. The Government must satisfy the Moslem demands, must redress Khalifat wrongs, right Punjab wrongs, and give complete swaraj, otherwise there would be no peace.

The judge will sum up on November 1st.—(Reuter.)

EMPIRE UNITY.

SYDNEY, Monday.

Speaking at a Mayoral dinner at Katoomba, in the Blue Mountains, to-day, Mr. James Dooley, the New South Wales Premier, deplored the fact that any section of the Empire should desire to break away, adding that the integrity of the Empire must be preserved in the aggregation of self-governing Dominions. Mr. Dooley expressed himself in favour of every section of the Empire possessing the full rights of self-government.—(Reuter.)

YESTERDAY IN THE LAW COURTS.

A "WIND SUCKER."

HORSE DEALERS' DISPUTE.

At Nisi Prius, before Mr. Justice Gordon and a city common jury, of which eight were ladies, the action brought by William Murphy against George Smith was tried. The plaintiff is a horse-dealer, and resides at Waterside, Waterford, and he sought to recover £105, the price of a horse, and for damages for breach of contract. The plaintiff said that the defendant gave him a warranty that the animal was sound and free from vice when he bought him at the Mallow Horse Show on June 29th, 1920. When the plaintiff took the horse home to Waterford he discovered that the animal was a "wind-sucker," and he wired to the defendant, who resides near Kanturk, and is also a horse-dealer and steeplechase rider. The plaintiff offered to return the horse to the defendant, but the defendant refused to accept him, or to repay the money that was paid. The defendant denied that the horse was unsound.

The plaintiff, in his evidence, stated that he met the defendant at the Cork Show on July 7th, and told him about the condition of the horse. The defendant refused to believe him, and said that he would see him (plaintiff) at Cahirmee Fair, a few days afterwards. The defendant kept avoiding him all day at Cahirmee, but he came upon him in the evening, and witness asked him what he was going to do, "one thing or the other." The defendant said that he would do nothing, adding: "You have the horse and I have the money." Subsequently witness had the horse examined by a veterinary surgeon, and he sent the defendant the V.S. certificate. He put the horse on "livery" with Mr. Dobbyn at two guineas a week. He was sold on August 6th last for 20 guineas at an auction. Plaintiff claimed the cost of livery as well as the price paid for the horse, which was a hunter.

The cross-examination suggested that the "wind-sucking" developed after the plaintiff had bought the horse.

Mr. Dobbyn, in his evidence, stated that the horse must have been affected before the plaintiff got him, because "wind-sucking" would not develop in the space of nine days. The horse was six years old, and was at the time witness first saw him worth £30. A horse may be a "wind-sucker" and yet show no outward sign of it. Such a horse would not be a useful one.

Mr. Christopher Rea, V.S., said that it was not possible for a horse to develop "wind-sucking," such as had been described in this case, in nine days. This horse could be heard twenty yards away.

The defendant and his groom were examined, and they swore that up to the day of the sale they had noticed no sign of "wind-sucking" on the horse.

The case had not concluded at the rising of the Court.

Mr. Sealy, K.C., and Mr. J. O'Byrne (instructed by Messrs. P. A. Murphy and Co.) appeared for the plaintiff.

Mr. Swayne, K.C., and Mr. Binchy (instructed by Messrs. H. H. Barry and Co.) appeared for the defendant.

RECRUITING INDUCEMENT.

WIDOW'S APPEAL FAILS.

In the Court of Appeal, before Lord Justices Ronan and O'Connor, an appeal was heard, in which Sarah Wilson applied for an order reversing a decision of the King's Bench Division, by which that Court set aside a verdict and judgment obtained by the plaintiff at Belfast Spring Assizes. The appellant is the widow of James Wilson, who had been employed by the Belfast Corporation, and who had volunteered for service in the late war. Wilson was killed in March, 1918, and his widow claimed £89 odd, being half wages from the date of her husband's enlistment until his death. The Corporation had passed a resolution, the effect of which was that they had offered and agreed to pay half wages to any of their employés who might volunteer for active service. The Corporation submitted that the deceased did not come within the terms of the resolution, and they further pleaded that the resolution relied on by the plaintiff had been revoked and altered. They also pleaded that there was no contract with the deceased to pay him half wages.

At the conclusion of the arguments, the Court gave judgment, dismissing the appeal with costs.

Mr. J. M. Whitaker, K.C., and Mr. Arthur Black (instructed by Mr. John McCormick, Town Solicitor), appeared for the Corporation.

Serjeant Hanna, Mr. J. McGonigal, K.C., and Mr. Lowry (instructed by Mr. T. E. Alexander), were counsel for the appellant.

OLD WOMAN'S WILL.

COMPETENCE CHALLENGED.

Before Mr. Justice Pim and a common jury, the probate suit brought by Edward O'Toole against Edward Flanagan, to prove the will of Ellen Healy, late of Limerick, was tried. The testatrix was the last of her family, and left no immediate next-of-kin. When she got too old to manage her farm she sold it and its stock for £1,900, and went into lodgings in the City of Limerick. The will in question was executed on September 20, 1920, and the testatrix died on January 7th last. She made a will in 1914, and another in 1916, in both of which she named the plaintiff executor, and left him a legacy. In the second will she left the defendant, who was a cousin of hers, £100, and in the will of September last she left him only £35, and she made other changes. Her net assets, after paying funeral and other expenses, were £986. She made bequests to the amount of £490, and the result would be that Mr. O'Toole would receive something about £450. The defendant questioned the will on the ground that the testatrix was not mentally competent to make a will, and the only question for the jury was whether she was or not.

Mr. O'Donnell proved the execution of the will, and Dr. M. McGrath proved that the testatrix was fully competent, and showed no sign of mental weakness, although she was an old woman.

The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, establishing the will.

Mr. P. Lynch, K.C., and Mr. P. Kelly (instructed by Mr. P. O'Donnell) appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. Serjeant Hanna and Mr. Phelps (instructed by Messrs. F. M. Fitt and Co.) were for the defendant.

CRIMINAL INJURY CLAIMS.

UNPAID AWARDS.

In the King's Bench Division, in the case of Nat Farley v. the County Council of Monaghan, Mr. McCoy (instructed by Messrs. M'Coy and Co.) applied for a writ of certiorari to make a decree of the County Court Judge a judgment of the High Court. The applicant, a farmer at Clincarrick, Co. Fermanagh, claimed against the County Council of Monaghan the sum of £174, part of a larger sum of £208 odd, awarded to him for criminal injury to his property. Of the £208 the County Court Judge had ordered the County Council of Fermanagh to pay £34, and that sum had been paid. The County Council of Monaghan refused to pay the £174, which they had been directed to pay in respect of the damaged property in their jurisdiction.

The application was granted.

In the case of John Herbert and Patrick Herbert v. the County Council of Monaghan, Mr. McCoy (the same solicitors instructing) made a similar application on behalf of the plaintiffs, who are farmers at Killyfully, Co. Monaghan, to remove into the High Court a decree of the County Court Judge for £200 awarded in respect of criminal injury to property.

This application was also granted.

WAR CONTRACT FOR HAY.

FARMER'S LIABILITY.

In the King's Bench Division yesterday, before the Lord Chief Justice, in the case of the Secretary for War v. Nicholas Boylan, a farmer, of Gilltown, Slane, Co. Meath, and in which an application was made on behalf of the plaintiff for final judgment, and also an application on behalf of the defendant for an order remitting the action for trial to the County Court Judge of Meath.

Mr. Sainsbury (instructed by the Chief Crown Solicitor), for the plaintiff, applied for final judgment for £36, the amount endorsed on the writ of summons in the action, which, it was alleged, the defendant had received for the use of the plaintiff in connection with the sale of hay. In an affidavit, Captain James Wilson Vance, of the Supplies and Transport, General Headquarters, Parkgate street, Dublin, submitted that the application to remit the action to the County Court should be refused, as the defendant had no defence to the claim.

In the month of September, 1918, the War Department purchased nine tons of hay from the defendant at £8 per ton, it being a term of the contract that the defendant should store the hay until the plaintiff should send a baler to bale the hay. Subsequently to the signing of the contract the plaintiff paid the defendant £36, half the purchase price of the hay, and agreed to pay the defendant interest on the balance of the purchase money at the rate of five per cent. per annum from the date of the contract to the date of the completion of the baling. The plaintiff sent the baler to the defendant early in January, 1920, for the purpose of baling the hay, and he was informed that the hay had been sold some time ago, as appeared from a letter received on behalf of the War Department from the baling contractor, dated 16th February, 1920. On the 4th March last the plaintiff applied through the solicitor to the defendant for the return of the deposit, and received a reply from Mr. F. G. McKeever, solicitor, Drogheda, on behalf of the defendant, asking for a reduction, as the defendant had suffered loss in the matter. The letter also stated that the defendant had "sold some of it and used the remainder."

Mr. Shannon (instructed by Mr. Patrick Tallan), who appeared for the defendant, pointed out that the contract was made in 1918. In 1920 they wrote to the plaintiff, asking when they were coming to bale the hay, and got no reply. The defendant, finding that the hay was going bad in the haggard, sold some, and used some of it himself. The defendant had been at a loss by keeping the hay so long, and was he expected to keep it for the plaintiff in the haggard for years? That would be quite unreasonable under the circumstances. In his affidavit the defendant stated that it was agreed that a machine to bale the hay should be sent to his premises, and that the hay was to be delivered within seven days from the completion of the baling, unless otherwise directed by the plaintiff in writing. No machine was ever sent to bale the hay; nor was any demand ever made upon him by the plaintiff, or, by any person on his behalf, to have the hay baled, or to deliver same. He did not have any communication with the plaintiff, or any person on his behalf, in reference to the contract until he received a letter from the Crown Solicitor, demanding the return of the deposit. He only got £63 for it, and was at an expense of £4 in delivering it. Having regard to the inordinate time that elapsed, he treated the contract as having been broken by the plaintiff. Mr. Shannon remarked that the defendant had evidently forgotten about the hay until recently, and submitted that the defendant had a good defence to the action, which could be satisfactorily dealt with by the County Court Judge.

The Lord Chief Justice granted the application for final judgment, and refused the application to remit with costs. If this man had a case, he remarked, he ought to have returned the money and sued for damages.

NEWRY PARTNERSHIP.

CLAIM FOR GOODS.

In the King's Bench Division, before the Lord Chief Justice, in the case of McKeown, MacKeogh, and Co., v. John Kenny,

Mr. Jos. O'Connor (instructed by Mr. Friery) applied on behalf of the defendant for an order giving him leave to join three other persons as defendants in the action which was brought to recover £63 odd, balance of the price of goods sold and delivered, on the ground that they were co-partners with the defendant at the time that the liability was contracted.

In an affidavit the defendant stated that he entered into partnership in the horse-dealing business with his mother, Mrs. Bridget Kenny, and his brothers Daniel and James and sons. The head office of the partnership was Killean Cottage, Flurrybridge, Newry, and they had two yards in Dublin—one at Montpelier terrace and the other at Raheny. The partnership was dissolved in May, 1919, when all the partnership accounts were settled, and the plaintiffs, amongst others, were paid the full amount due to them. The defendant denied having received any of the goods, the price of which was now claimed, and alleged that the account furnished was an after-thought. If there was any claim, it was against the partnership. He, therefore, asked to be allowed to join his mother and two brothers as co-defendants, or, in the alternative, that the proceedings should be stayed.

The Lord Chief Justice asked why the plaintiffs should be burthened by joining three other persons, whom the defendant said were not liable.

Mr. O'Byrne (instructed by Mr. James Fagan) opposed the application on behalf of the plaintiffs, relying on an affidavit which alleged that the goods claimed for were supplied, and that the defendant asked to have his account kept separate from that of his brothers.

The application was refused, with costs.

BOMB OUTRAGE IN HAVANA.

HAVANA, Monday.

A bomb exploded this morning at the house of Mr. Fernando Gonzales Verdenes, an architect, situated in the better-class quarter of the city, and did considerable damage. The police believe that the outrage may be connected with the extremists' threats against Major-General Enoch Crowder and the United States Legation here. Such threats were made in proclamations distributed on Saturday in connection with the case of Sacco and Vanzetti, the two Italian Communists sentenced to death.—(Reuter.)

After lasting several days, the trial of Thomas Malley, chief engineer, on the charge of scuttling the British steamer Spathari, concluded at Glasgow last evening, when the jury found the charge was not proved, and the accused was discharged.

The charge against three men and a woman at Newcastle, of having high explosives in their possession, was further investigated yesterday, and again adjourned.

BOOKMAKERS' DECISION.

CONFERENCE ON BETTING LAW.

CHEQUES STILL TO BE ACCEPTED.

Representatives of the principal Turf commission agents in London and the provinces were represented last night at a meeting held at the Holborn Restaurant, under the ægis of the Turf Guardian Society, to consider the situation which has arisen out of the recent decision of the House of Lords that money paid over in the form of cheques in payment of bets are recoverable.

The meeting was private, but a representative of the Press Association was informed at its conclusion that Mr. Charles Read was in the chair, and that a statement regarding the position was made by the Secretary of the Society, Mr. W. J. Randall; and Mr. John J. Hands, the solicitor, dealt fully with the legal possibilities.

A resolution was passed, saying "that, having regard to the justice of their cause, the common-sense of the English people and the bill which Lord Muir Mackenzie is proposing to introduce into the House of Lords, for which it is understood that he has general support, the meeting does not recommend that there should be any immediate general change in the recognised system of settling accounts."

A special committee was appointed to deal with the situation, comprising the Chairman of the meeting, the Secretary of the Society, Messrs. Alfred Knight (Messrs. John Anderson and Co.), F. L. Smith, Eason, and Joyce (Messrs. Ladbroke and Co.), Alfred Carrington, and Lionel Phillips, with power to add to their numbers. Mr. Randall further stated that another resolution had been passed, thanking Lord Muir Mackenzie for the attitude he had taken up on the matter. He remarked that the meeting felt that there was little need for alarm, and that the situation in some quarters had been greatly exaggerated.

GENERAL HOUSE CLEANING.

There was among all the members of the Society, he went on, a feeling of absolute confidence in their cause. The Committee which has been appointed will deal with propaganda, and will take every possible step to see that the case is fully set out for the information of the public. Moreover, the Committee will deal with any further question requiring legislation, and will oppose any bill which interferes with the reasonable liberty of the people, but it will support anything to bring about the better condition of the racecourse. It will seek conference with Tattersall's Committee and the Jockey Club with a view to eliminating many of the evils to which so much public attention has been called during the past few years.

It has been stated, Mr. Randall went on, "that there is no possibility of further betting legislation during the present session. All that can be hoped for is the repeal of the objectionable clauses of the 1835 Act, upon which Lord Muir Mackenzie is to introduce his bill, but we feel that, once having set up a committee to deal with propaganda, and having reason to believe that another betting bill will be introduced in Parliament at the earliest possible moment, the Committee felt that it should promote and support some legislation which would make an attempt to clear out of the Turf world the many bogus starting price office keepers and other undesirables—hooligans—who now discredit the racing world."

UNSCRUPULOUS TACTICS.

Mr. Randall added that evidence was submitted to the meeting, giving "instances of where unscrupulous people were endeavouring to persuade Turf commission agents to compromise concerning claims with respect to money paid by cheques." "Some such people," he said, "were endeavouring to get an immediate cash payment of something like 50 per cent. of the amount, under a threat of proceedings."

The meeting agreed that there should be no such private compromises, especially as in some of the cases referred to, members of the Society were found to be in a position of making large claims in this respect against the persons who were threatening them with proceedings.

It was also agreed "that in every case where a man takes action for the recovery of an amount paid by cheque, that his name shall be published to all the members of the Society, and that members shall be required at once to forward to the Society full particulars of the transaction they may have had with the party in question, and that in no case shall any settlement of the claim be made without the evidence being heard in open court, and judgment publicly delivered."

A letter was read from Lord Muir Mackenzie to the meeting, stating:—"I am intending to bring in a bill simply to repeal the section of the Act of 1835, which has caused the trouble, and to enable any debt which can legally be paid in money to be paid by cheque." It is understood that the bill will only contain one or two clauses. The measure has not yet been drafted, and that Lord Muir Mackenzie is in communication with other members of the House of Lords on the subject.

NO PARI-MUTUEL.

Mr. Shortt, answering Colonel Newman yesterday in the House of Commons, said that his attention had been called to the recent decision in regard to betting by cheque. He was not prepared, in order to regularise the position so created, and to provide revenue for the State, to introduce legislation, legalising betting on the Pari-Mutuel or Totalisator principle.

CRICKET.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE CLUB RECONSTRUCTED.

The Northamptonshire County Cricket Club, having been in a state of suspended animation since the general meeting of members, when the committee and officials were called upon to resign, was reconstructed at a special meeting held at Northampton Town Hall yesterday. Lord Lilford, supported by his co-trustees, in whose hands the affairs of the club have remained of late, presided, and nominated a new committee of thirty, including the names of most members of the old committee. The trustees' nominees were acceptable to the meeting, and the committee as suggested was appointed. Lord Lilford declined to continue as president, though promising to maintain his old interest in the club, and Mr. Thomas Harton, for eleven years captain of the county eleven, accepted the position, urging on the members the necessity of pulling together lest Northants should drop out of county cricket.

EXHIBITION OF IRISH GOODS.

At the Council meeting of the Dublin Industrial Development Association it was stated that satisfactory progress was being made with the fitting up of the premises, 40 Upper Sackville street, where the Association is shortly opening a permanent exhibition for the display of Irish goods of all classes. Space is now being allotted. Goods of all kinds, from motor tractors to lace, foodstuffs, furniture, and paper, will be displayed, and it is intended to make the showrooms a miniature exhibition of everything Ireland produces.

The Director of the Royal Dublin Society wrote inviting the assistance of the Council in organising a trades exhibition of Irish manufactures at Ballsbridge. The acceptance of the invitation to co-operate was unanimously approved.

SHANKAT ALI'S DEFENCE.

KARACHI, Saturday.

At to-day's resumption of the trial of the Ali brothers, which is proceeding here, Shankat Ali was the last of the accused to address the jury. He declared that he was perfectly willing to make friends with Englishmen so long as they did not oppress his religion and country. He said that he personally was not responsible for distributing seductive leaflets to the troops, but the propaganda of the Khalifat Committee was such that they would distribute them to every Indian soldier, even if ten thousand majors and colonels were posted to guard them. He and his companions were non-violent Co-Operators, but if the doctrine of non-violence had failed by the 31st December, then, if circumstances permitted, they might resort to violence. The present prosecution would not serve the Government's purpose. The Government must satisfy the Moslem demands, must redress Khalifat wrongs, right Punjab wrongs, and give complete swaraj, otherwise there would be no peace.

The judge will sum up on November 1st.—(Reuter.)

EMPIRE UNITY.

SYDNEY, Monday.

Speaking at a Mayoral dinner at Katoomba, in the Blue Mountains, to-day, Mr. James Dooley, the New South Wales Premier, deplored the fact that any section of the Empire should desire to break away, adding that the integrity of the Empire must be preserved in the aggregation of self-governing Dominions. Mr. Dooley expressed himself in favour of every section of the Empire possessing the full rights of self-government.—(Reuter.)

YESTERDAY IN THE LAW COURTS.

A "WIND SUCKER."

HORSE DEALERS' DISPUTE.

At Nisi Prius, before Mr. Justice Gordon and a city common jury, of which eight were ladies, the action brought by William Murphy against George Smith was tried. The plaintiff is a horse-dealer, and resides at Waterside, Waterford, and he sought to recover £105, the price of a horse, and for damages for breach of contract. The plaintiff said that the defendant gave him a warranty that the animal was sound and free from vice when he bought him at the Mallow Horse Show on June 29th, 1920. When the plaintiff took the horse home to Waterford he discovered that the animal was a "wind-sucker," and he wired to the defendant, who resides near Kanturk, and is also a horse-dealer and steeplechase rider. The plaintiff offered to return the horse to the defendant, but the defendant refused to accept him, or to repay the money that was paid. The defendant denied that the horse was unsound.

The plaintiff, in his evidence, stated that he met the defendant at the Cork Show on July 7th, and told him about the condition of the horse. The defendant refused to believe him, and said that he would see him (plaintiff) at Cahirmee Fair, a few days afterwards. The defendant kept avoiding him all day at Cahirmee, but he came upon him in the evening, and witness asked him what he was going to do, "one thing or the other." The defendant said that he would do nothing, adding: "You have the horse and I have the money." Subsequently witness had the horse examined by a veterinary surgeon, and he sent the defendant the V.S. certificate. He put the horse on "livery" with Mr. Dobbyn at two guineas a week. He was sold on August 6th last for 20 guineas at an auction. Plaintiff claimed the cost of livery as well as the price paid for the horse, which was a hunter.

The cross-examination suggested that the "wind-sucking" developed after the plaintiff had bought the horse.

Mr. Dobbyn, in his evidence, stated that the horse must have been affected before the plaintiff got him, because "wind-sucking" would not develop in the space of nine days. The horse was six years old, and was at the time witness first saw him worth £30. A horse may be a "wind-sucker" and yet show no outward sign of it. Such a horse would not be a useful one.

Mr. Christopher Rea, V.S., said that it was not possible for a horse to develop "wind-sucking," such as had been described in this case, in nine days. This horse could be heard twenty yards away.

The defendant and his groom were examined, and they swore that up to the day of the sale they had noticed no sign of "wind-sucking" on the horse.

The case had not concluded at the rising of the Court.

Mr. Sealy, K.C., and Mr. J. O'Byrne (instructed by Messrs. P. A. Murphy and Co.) appeared for the plaintiff.

Mr. Swayne, K.C., and Mr. Binchy (instructed by Messrs. H. H. Barry and Co.) appeared for the defendant.

RECRUITING INDUCEMENT.

WIDOW'S APPEAL FAILS.

In the Court of Appeal, before Lord Justices Ronan and O'Connor, an appeal was heard, in which Sarah Wilson applied for an order reversing a decision of the King's Bench Division, by which that Court set aside a verdict and judgment obtained by the plaintiff at Belfast Spring Assizes. The appellant is the widow of James Wilson, who had been employed by the Belfast Corporation, and who had volunteered for service in the late war. Wilson was killed in March, 1918, and his widow claimed £89 odd, being half wages from the date of her husband's enlistment until his death. The Corporation had passed a resolution, the effect of which was that they had offered and agreed to pay half wages to any of their employés who might volunteer for active service. The Corporation submitted that the deceased did not come within the terms of the resolution, and they further pleaded that the resolution relied on by the plaintiff had been revoked and altered. They also pleaded that there was no contract with the deceased to pay him half wages.

At the conclusion of the arguments, the Court gave judgment, dismissing the appeal with costs.

Mr. J. M. Whitaker, K.C., and Mr. Arthur Black (instructed by Mr. John McCormick, Town Solicitor), appeared for the Corporation.

Serjeant Hanna, Mr. J. McGonigal, K.C., and Mr. Lowry (instructed by Mr. T. E. Alexander), were counsel for the appellant.

OLD WOMAN'S WILL.

COMPETENCE CHALLENGED.

Before Mr. Justice Pim and a common jury, the probate suit brought by Edward O'Toole against Edward Flanagan, to prove the will of Ellen Healy, late of Limerick, was tried. The testatrix was the last of her family, and left no immediate next-of-kin. When she got too old to manage her farm she sold it and its stock for £1,900, and went into lodgings in the City of Limerick. The will in question was executed on September 20, 1920, and the testatrix died on January 7th last. She made a will in 1914, and another in 1916, in both of which she named the plaintiff executor, and left him a legacy. In the second will she left the defendant, who was a cousin of hers, £100, and in the will of September last she left him only £35, and she made other changes. Her net assets, after paying funeral and other expenses, were £986. She made bequests to the amount of £490, and the result would be that Mr. O'Toole would receive something about £450. The defendant questioned the will on the ground that the testatrix was not mentally competent to make a will, and the only question for the jury was whether she was or not.

Mr. O'Donnell proved the execution of the will, and Dr. M. McGrath proved that the testatrix was fully competent, and showed no sign of mental weakness, although she was an old woman.

The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, establishing the will.

Mr. P. Lynch, K.C., and Mr. P. Kelly (instructed by Mr. P. O'Donnell) appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. Serjeant Hanna and Mr. Phelps (instructed by Messrs. F. M. Fitt and Co.) were for the defendant.

CRIMINAL INJURY CLAIMS.

UNPAID AWARDS.

In the King's Bench Division, in the case of Nat Farley v. the County Council of Monaghan,

Mr. McCoy (instructed by Messrs. M'Coy and Co.) applied for a writ of certiorari to make a decree of the County Court Judge a judgment of the High Court. The applicant, a farmer at Clincarrick, Co. Fermanagh, claimed against the County Council of Monaghan the sum of £174, part of a larger sum of £208 odd, awarded to him for criminal injury to his property. Of the £208 the County Court Judge had ordered the County Council of Fermanagh to pay £34, and that sum had been paid. The County Council of Monaghan refused to pay the £174, which they had been directed to pay in respect of the damaged property in their jurisdiction.

The application was granted.

In the case of John Herbert and Patrick Herbert v. the County Council of Monaghan,

Mr. McCoy (the same solicitors instructing) made a similar application on behalf of the plaintiffs, who are farmers at Killyfully, Co. Monaghan, to remove into the High Court a decree of the County Court Judge for £200 awarded in respect of criminal injury to property.

This application was also granted.

WAR CONTRACT FOR HAY.

FARMER'S LIABILITY.

In the King's Bench Division yesterday, before the Lord Chief Justice, in the case of the Secretary for War v. Nicholas Boylan, a farmer, of Gilltown, Slane, Co Meath, and in which an application was made on behalf of the plaintiff for final judgment, and also an application on behalf of the defendant for an order remitting the action for trial to the County Court Judge of Meath.

Mr. Sainsbury (instructed by the Chief Crown Solicitor), for the plaintiff, applied for final judgment for £36, the amount endorsed on the writ of summons in the action, which, it was alleged, the defendant had received for the use of the plaintiff in connection with the sale of hay. In an affidavit, Captain James Wilson Vance, of the Supplies and Transport, General Headquarters, Parkgate street, Dublin, submitted that the application to remit the action to the County Court should be refused, as the defendant had no defence to the claim.

In the month of September, 1918, the War Department purchased nine tons of hay from the defendant at £8 per ton, it being a term of the contract that the defendant should store the hay until the plaintiff should send a baler to bale the hay. Subsequently to the signing of the contract the plaintiff paid the defendant £36, half the purchase price of the hay, and agreed to pay the defendant interest on the balance of the purchase money at the rate of five per cent. per annum from the date of the contract to the date of the completion of the baling. The plaintiff sent the baler to the defendant early in January, 1920, for the purpose of baling the hay, and he was informed that the hay had been sold some time ago, as appeared from a letter received on behalf of the War Department from the baling contractor, dated 16th February, 1920. On the 4th March last the plaintiff applied through the solicitor to the defendant for the return of the deposit, and received a reply from Mr. F. G. McKeever, solicitor, Drogheda, on behalf of the defendant, asking for a reduction, as the defendant had suffered loss in the matter. The letter also stated that the defendant had "sold some of it and used the remainder."

Mr. Shannon (instructed by Mr. Patrick Tallan), who appeared for the defendant, pointed out that the contract was made in 1918. In 1920 they wrote to the plaintiff, asking when they were coming to bale the hay, and got no reply. The defendant, finding that the hay was going bad in the haggard, sold some, and used some of it himself. The defendant had been at a loss by keeping the hay so long, and was he expected to keep it for the plaintiff in the haggard for years? That would be quite unreasonable under the circumstances. In his affidavit the defendant stated that it was agreed that a machine to bale the hay should be sent to his premises, and that the hay was to be delivered within seven days from the completion of the baling, unless otherwise directed by the plaintiff in writing. No machine was ever sent to bale the hay; nor was any demand ever made upon him by the plaintiff, or by any person on his behalf, to have the hay baled, or to deliver same. He did not have any communication with the plaintiff, or any person on his behalf, in reference to the contract until he received a letter from the Crown Solicitor, demanding the return of the deposit. He only got £63 for it, and was at an expense of £4 in delivering it. Having regard to the inordinate time that elapsed, he treated the contract as having been broken by the plaintiff. Mr. Shannon remarked that the defendant had evidently forgotten about the hay until recently, and submitted that the defendant had a good defence to the action, which could be satisfactorily dealt with by the County Court Judge.

The Lord Chief Justice granted the application for final judgment, and refused the application to remit with costs. If this man had a case, he remarked, he ought to have returned the money and sued for damages.

NEWRY PARTNERSHIP.

CLAIM FOR GOODS.

In the King's Bench Division, before the Lord Chief Justice, in the case of McKeown, MacKeogh, and Co., v. John Kenny,

Mr. Jos. O'Connor (instructed by Mr. Friery) applied on behalf of the defendant for an order giving him leave to join three other persons as defendants in the action which was brought to recover £63 odd, balance of the price of goods sold and delivered, on the ground that they were co-partners with the defendant at the time that the liability was contracted.

In an affidavit the defendant stated that he entered into partnership in the horse-dealing business with his mother, Mrs. Bridget Kenny, and his brothers Daniel and James and sons. The head office of the partnership was Killean Cottage, Flurrybridge, Newry, and they had two yards in Dublin—one at Montpelier terrace and the other at Raheny. The partnership was dissolved in May, 1919, when all the partnership accounts were settled, and the plaintiffs, amongst others, were paid the full amount due to them. The defendant denied having received any of the goods, the price of which was now claimed, and alleged that the account furnished was an after-thought. If there was any claim, it was against the partnership. He, therefore, asked to be allowed to join his mother and two brothers as co-defendants, or, in the alternative, that the proceedings should be stayed.

The Lord Chief Justice asked why the plaintiffs should be burthened by joining three other persons, whom the defendant said were not liable.

Mr. O'Byrne (instructed by Mr. James Fagan) opposed the application on behalf of the plaintiffs, relying on an affidavit which alleged that the goods claimed for were supplied, and that the defendant asked to have his account kept separate from that of his brothers.

The application was refused, with costs.

BOMB OUTRAGE IN HAVANA.

HAVANA, Monday.

A bomb exploded this morning at the house of Mr. Fernando Gonzales Verdenes, an architect, situated in the better-class quarter of the city, and did considerable damage. The police believe that the outrage may be connected with the extremists' threats against Major-General Enoch Crowder and the United States Legation here. Such threats were made in proclamations distributed on Saturday in connection with the case of Sacco and Vanzetti, the two Italian Communists sentenced to death.—(Reuter.)

After lasting several days, the trial of Thomas Malley, chief engineer, on the charge of scuttling the British steamer Spathari, concluded at Glasgow last evening, when the jury found the charge was not proved, and the accused was discharged.

The charge against three men and a woman at Newcastle, of having high explosives in their possession, was further investigated yesterday, and again adjourned.

BOOKMAKERS' DECISION.

CONFERENCE ON BETTING LAW.

CHEQUES STILL TO BE ACCEPTED.

Representatives of the principal Turf commission agents in London and the provinces were represented last night at a meeting held at the Holborn Restaurant, under the ægis of the Turf Guardian Society, to consider the situation which has arisen out of the recent decision of the House of Lords that money paid over in the form of cheques in payment of bets are recoverable.

The meeting was private, but a representative of the Press Association was informed at its conclusion that Mr. Charles Read was in the chair, and that a statement regarding the position was made by the Secretary of the Society, Mr. W. J. Randall; and Mr. John J. Hands, the solicitor, dealt fully with the legal possibilities.

A resolution was passed, saying "that, having regard to the justice of their cause, the commonsense of the English people and the bill which Lord Muir Mackenzie is proposing to introduce into the House of Lords, for which it is understood that he has general support, the meeting does not recommend that there should be any immediate general change in the recognised system of settling accounts."

A special committee was appointed to deal with the situation, comprising the Chairman of the meeting, the Secretary of the Society, Messrs. Alfred Knight (Messrs. John Anderson and Co.), H. L. Smith, Eason, and Joyce (Messrs. Ladbroke and Co.), Alfred Carrington, and Lionel Phillips, with power to add to their numbers. Mr. Randall further stated that another resolution had been passed, thanking Lord Muir Mackenzie for the attitude he had taken up on the matter. He remarked that the meeting felt that there was little need for alarm, and that the situation in some quarters had been greatly exaggerated.

GENERAL HOUSE CLEANING.

There was among all the members of the Society, he went on, a feeling of absolute confidence in their cause. The Committee which has been appointed will deal with propaganda, and will take every possible step to see that the case is fully set out for the information of the public. Moreover, the Committee will deal with any further question requiring legislation, and will oppose any bill which interferes with the reasonable liberty of the people, but it will support anything to bring about the better condition of the racecourse. It will seek conference with Tattersall's Committee and the Jockey Club, with a view to eliminating many of the evils to which so much public attention has been called during the past few years.

It has been stated, Mr. Randall went on, "that there is no possibility of further betting legislation during the present session. All that can be hoped for is the repeal of the objectionable clauses of the 1835 Act, upon which Lord Muir Mackenzie is to introduce his bill, but we feel that, once having set up a committee to deal with propaganda, and having reason to believe that another betting bill will be introduced in Parliament at the earliest possible moment, the Committee felt that it should promote and support some legislation which would make an attempt to clear out of the Turf world the many bogus starting price office keepers and other undesirables—hooligans—who now discredit the racing world."

UNSCRUPULOUS TACTICS.

Mr. Randall added that evidence was submitted to the meeting, giving "instances of where unscrupulous people were endeavouring to persuade Turf commission agents to compromise concerning claims with respect to money paid by cheques." "Some such people," he said, "were endeavouring to get an immediate cash payment of something like 50 per cent. of the amount, under a threat of proceedings.

The meeting agreed that there should be no such private compromises, especially as in some of the cases referred to, members of the Society were found to be in a position of making large claims in this respect against the persons who were threatening them with proceedings.

It was also agreed "that in every case where a man takes action for the recovery of an amount paid by cheque, that his name shall be published to all the members of the Society, and that members shall be required at once to forward to the Society full particulars of the transaction they may have had with the party in question, and that in no case shall any settlement of the claim be made without the evidence being heard in open court, and judgment publicly delivered."

A letter was read from Lord Muir Mackenzie to the meeting, stating:—"I am intending to bring in a bill simply to repeal the section of the Act of 1835, which has caused the trouble, and to enable any debt which can legally be paid in money to be paid by cheque." It is understood that the bill will only contain one or two clauses. The measure has not yet been drafted, and that Lord Muir Mackenzie is in communication with other members of the House of Lords on the subject.

NO PARI-MUTUEL.

Mr. Shortt, answering Colonel Newman yesterday in the House of Commons, said that his attention had been called to the recent decision in regard to betting by cheque. He was not prepared, in order to regularise the position so created, and to provide revenue for the State, to introduce legislation, legalising betting on the Pari-Mutuel or Totalisator principle.

The Northamptonshire County Cricket Club, having been in a state of suspended animation since the general meeting of members, when the committee and officials were called upon to resign, was reconstructed at a special meeting held at Northampton Town Hall yesterday. Lord Lilford, supported by his co-trustees, in whose hands the affairs of the club have remained of late, presided, and nominated a new committee of thirty, including the names of most members of the old committee. The trustees' nominees were submitted to the meeting, and the committee as suggested was appointed. Lord Lilford declined to continue as president, though promising to maintain his old interest in the club, and Mr. Thomas Harton, for eleven years captain of the county eleven, accepted the position, urging on the members the necessity of pulling together lest Northants should drop out of county cricket.

SPORTING PARAGRAPHS.

The time of the London Cup (1¼m.), won by Envoy at Alexandra Park on Saturday, was returned at 2 mins. 5 4-5 secs.

Fiddle Bridge, the winner of the Trent Plate at the recent Nottingham Meeting, has been objected to on a question of eligibility to run.

Owners and trainers are reminded that entries for the Maiden Plate value 500 sovs., to be run for at Punchestown next year, close to-morrow.

Baron Gustave Springer, of Vienna, the Austrian breeder and owner, who raced in many parts of the Continent, and who died on April 12, 1920, left estate in the United Kingdom valued at £35,858.

A. Taylor, the Manton trainer, has this season turned out the winners of forty-eight races, worth £47,376; De Mestre the winners of thirty races, value £27,356, and B. Jarvis, the winners of thirty-four races worth £25,008.

The work of remodelling the turns on the Aintree racecourse is now completed, and has received official approval, which will doubtless be thoroughly endorsed by owners and trainers who will be represented at next week's Liverpool meeting.

Moulton Paddocks Newmarket, are to be sold by the late Sir Ernest Cassel's executors. The racing stables are amongst the best equipped in England, and the estate includes about 1,305 acres, with mansion house. There is good shooting and a well-appointed farm and dairy, and a stud farm with good accommodation.

Mr. S. B. Joel heads the list of winning owners in England to date with £28,983, the value of thirty-four races won by twenty-three horses. Lord Astor (£22,574) and Mr. J. Watson (£18,488) come next. Among the sires Polymelus still leads, his stock having so far won £33,467 in stakes, or nearly £5,000 more than is credited to the progeny of Sunstar.

STRONG FIELDS AT BIRMINGHAM.

CHI-LO-SA'S VICTORY.

GREAT EFFORT BY FIDDLE-DE-DEE.

Few made courses, as distinct from old Down tracks like Salisbury, furnish better going under all kinds of weather conditions than Birmingham, and trainers yesterday availed themselves of the opportunity of the galloping on the capital turf at Castle Bromwich, with the result that fields were of the old-time Autumn strength.

The Packington Handicap, as a thousand pounds handicap, was instituted for the first time last year, and has proved an instantaneous success. It was an idea of the clerk of the course, Mr. Stanley Ford, who said to me yesterday: "The Great Eastern Railway Handicap at Newmarket was about the only important sprint handicap left for the Autumn, and I thought this a good idea to give the sprinters a chance here." There was a parade before the race, and this was much appreciated by the public.

Fiddle-de-Dee had not so formidable a burden as at Newmarket last week. Still he was set a severe task, and was expected to accomplish it. He made a great effort, but was quite unable to get on terms with Chi-Lo-Sa, who was in front from end to end, Brennan riding a very confident race. Maxwell displayed good speed, but failed to stay.

Limosin, who has been expected in several races in which he has taken part, cantered away with the Juvenile Plate. He is a big, fine-looking colt, and carries the colours of a well-known sporting journalist. Silver Thistle, in taking the Coventry Nursery, increased the long list of winners under a penalty.

Jockeys' engagements here to-day include:—Donoghue—Glorioso. Bullock—Dumfries. Cooper—Sangrail, Bellchase gelding, and Flight's Fancy. Fox—Wheat King and Blagueur. Whalley—Nevolnice gelding. Smyth—More Sanity and Burly. Piper—Warrington.

SELECTIONS FOR TO-DAY.

BIRMINGHAM, Monday.

Another attractive card is provided here tomorrow, when the Autumn fixture will be concluded. The half-dozen events include nothing of the value of the Packington Handicap, but the Sutton Handicap is for a stake of 800 sovs., and, being run for over the long course, the result may furnish a pointer for the more important distance handicaps at Newbury and Liverpool. On his running behind Finchale last week, Double Hackle appears temptingly handicapped, but it is an exceedingly open affair. My selections are appended:—

Bromford Plate—Felim.
Solihull Nursery—Black Panther.
Burton Nursery—Nevolnice gelding.
Sutton Handicap—Double Hackle or Glorioso.
Harborne Plate—Tetragynia.
Tamworth Plate—Senhora.

BOXING.

HONEYMAN BEATEN.

POOR BOUT FOR FEATHER-WEIGHT HONOURS.

The match at the National Sporting Club, London, last night between Mike Honeyman (Canning Town) and Ike Fox (Leeds) for the Lonsdale Feather-weight Belt was the first event of importance in the club's winter programme.

Incidentally, it promised a good contest. Honeyman, the holder, had won the trophy in two contests, and another success last night meant his absolute possession of the belt and the honour shared by Jim Driscoll and Tancy Lee, who won the previous belts outright. Honeyman has proved himself an exceptionally fast boxer with hands, feet, and head, and in his fight against Tancy Lee he proved that he had punishing power behind his blows. On his record his claim to his title cannot be disputed. At the weigh-in at 8st. 13½lb. he had but half a pound in hand. He had all the other physical advantages, being an inch and a half taller and possessing much longer reach.

Fox has done little in the ring since his return from America, where he had by no means a brilliant career at the close. Since then he has not been in the limelight, but in his gymnastic trials lately he was supposed to have developed greater boxing powers, and hence his being matched against the champion last night for side stakes and purse money amounting to over £1,000.

Fox won on points after twenty rounds of very poor boxing and very little incident to excite the crowded house. Fox was the stronger, and towards the finish did most of the fighting, but there was never much to choose between them. The opening rounds were not eventful, little happening beyond light sparring and some clinching. Though Fox worried his man, Honeyman showed better form in out-fighting, and was smart in avoiding danger when his rival tried to get into close quarters.

In the fifth round Honeyman scored with right and lefts to both head and body, and received little in return. Fox was the aggressor in the seventh round, when he rushed in and tried to fight his man, but Honeyman evaded punishment.

SPANIARD OUTCLASSED.

The principal contest at the Blackfriars Ring yesterday afternoon was one of 15 rounds between Matt Wells, of Camberwell, and Carlos, of Spain. Wells, who won the amateur light-weight championship 17 years ago, was a stone the heavier, but he outclassed and severely punished the Spaniard, the referee stopping the contest in the thirteenth round. Carlos was full of pluck, but had little chance against the more experienced Englishman.

ANGLING.

SALMON AND TROUT SEASON ENDS.

Yesterday the angling season for salmon and trout terminated throughout Ireland under fairly favourable conditions. A stiff south-west wind blew steadily, the rivers were in pretty good order everywhere, and the closing day must have been well marked on many waters.

The Shannon was high in the last week of the season, and not very much was done, and the same remark applies to some of the larger Southern rivers, in which plenty of salmon are now running from the tidal waters. Netting, of course, has been over for some weeks, and the fish latterly had a clear run through from the tidal waters.

There was a marked absence of recorded heavy salmon on the Shannon, Blackwater, Lee, and other rivers noted for their heavy fish. The 45-pounders were few and very far between, and the "harvest fish" did not appear in any great numbers.

There will now be no salmon or trout fishing in Ireland till the 1st February next, when a large number of rivers noted for early fishing will open for the season of 1922. In the meantime, pike, perch, roach, and other coarse fish may be angled for, provided that they are not in waters frequented by salmon or trout.

BILLIARDS.

SMITH v. INMAN.

These professionals commenced an exhibition match of 16,000 up, on level terms, at Leicester square, London, yesterday afternoon. Smith had the best of the opening stage, making breaks of 73, 141, 82, and 266 (unfinished) against Inman's 57, 213, and 126. Interval scores:—Smith, 666; Inman, 484.

At night Smith again had the better of the exchanges, and increased his lead. He took his unfinished break of the afternoon to 446, subsequently adding runs of 177, 72, and 69. Inman's breaks were 140 and 121. Closing scores:—Smith, 1,334; Inman, 901.

FALKINER'S MODERATE DISPLAY.

Newman and Falkiner commenced a week's match of 8,000 up at Preston yesterday. In the afternoon session Newman made breaks of 129, 121, 276, and 96 (unfinished), while Falkiner did nothing better than 58. Interval scores:—Newman, 667; Falkiner, 543. At night Newman collected his quota of points in three visits to the table, making [illegible] break 179. He also had items of 146, 238, and 200 (unfinished). Closing scores:—Newman, 1,334; Falkiner, 315.

HURRYING TO BE MARRIED.

When Patrick McGinley (25), of Londonderry, was fined 20s. at Preston for travelling without a ticket on the London and North-Western Railway from Carlisle to Preston yesterday, he stated that he should have been married at 11 o'clock that morning. His bride was in court. The couple left the building together, and went to the church. The defendant was admonished by the Chairman for his nonchalant attitude in the dock, and was asked if he considered the court was a music hall.

AUSTRALIAN PROBLEMS.

MELBOURNE, Monday.

A conference between Mr. Hughes and the State Premiers opened here to-day. The items to be discussed include uniform railway gauge, disposal of wheat harvest, soldier settlement, finance, and the future of arbitration.—(Reuter.)

[The question of changing the railway gauge in Queensland has frequently been raised. In Victoria and New South Wales the gauge is the same, and trains run through from Melbourne to Sydney, but passengers from Sydney to Brisbane have to change trains on the State border.]

WEATHER FORECAST.

General Inference.—A deep depression off the North of Scotland is moving in an easterly direction and growing deeper. It will cause fresh to strong or high winds from south-west and west or north-west in most parts of the Kingdom, and a gale on the North Sea. Some rain will be experienced in nearly all localities. In the rear of the depression temperature may be expected to fall considerably.

Ireland, N.W., N.E.—Wind south-west, veering to north-west or north, fresh or strong, a gale in places; much cloud; some rain, hail, sleet, or snow; visibility fair; temperature falling decidedly.

Ireland, S.E., S.W.—Wind between south-west and north-west, fresh or strong; cloudy or dull; some rain; visibility fair; temperature falling.

NEWS SUMMARY.

Four female prisoners escaped by means of a rope ladder from Mountjoy Jail on Sunday night.—(P. 6.)

Although the price of bread has been reduced in Dublin, it is still 1½d. a pound dearer than in London. A few commodities have fallen in price, but others have increased, so that the average level is the same now as three weeks ago.—(P. 5.)

The Lord Mayor of Belfast said yesterday that the prospects for the continuance of peace in the city were satisfactory.—(P. 6.)

The Commons last night rejected the motion censuring the Government's Irish policy by a majority of 396.—(P. 5.)

The principal bookmakers of London and the provinces had a conference yesterday to discuss the effects of the cheque bets decision. It was agreed that, although the matter should be adjusted by an Act of Parliament, the position was not so difficult as had been asserted.—(P. 3.)

The amount to be provided immediately by the State to deal with unemployment is £12,000,000.—(P. 5.)

Four persons were found dead in a house at Streatham, London, all apparently having been poisoned.—(P. 5.)

London Stock Markets had a brighter appearance. Supplies of capital continued plentiful. German marks fell away to 706½. Dublin Market improved in places.—(P. 7.)

A Clear Issue.

The House of Commons has rejected by an overwhelming majority the motion which invited it to condemn the whole policy of the Irish Peace Conference. The indictment, framed by a small group of English Unionists, was based on two grounds. The first was that the Government was conducting momentous transactions without the sanction of Parliament; and the second, that it was holding these transactions with men who had repudiated the authority of the Crown. The Prime Minister dealt effectively with both charges. The proceedings of the Conference were secret because no other means of negotiation could produce material results; and the rights of Parliament were safeguarded completely by the fact that every principle and detail of any proposed settlement must receive its sanction. The second point—the political status of the Irish delegates—has perplexed and disturbed large numbers of loyal men, both English and Irish, whom nobody could describe as extremists. We believe, however, that the Government's position, as defined by Mr. Lloyd George, is entirely sound. It is the position which the mass of Southern Irish Unionists has adopted—men whose loyalty to the Throne and Empire, as the Prime Minister said yesterday, nobody will dare to question. A point had been reached where the Government's alternatives were a final bid for peace and a new and intensified campaign of warfare which would have brought incalculable disaster to both countries. That warfare may yet be in store for us—though God forbid!—but every effort to avert it was justifiable. When the principle of negotiation was accepted it became clear that, if peace was to be attained, the negotiators for Ireland must be men who represented the majority of the Irish people. It was, as Mr. Lloyd George said yesterday, a case of "confer or crush"; and conference with any save those who can fulfil their undertakings would have been sheer waste of time.

The House of Commons has given the Government full power to continue the negotiations until peace has been gained or until the last hope of peace has been extinguished. That is one valuable result of yesterday's debate. When the Conference is resumed the Government's representatives will find themselves armed with fresh and unchallengable authority to speak for the British people. If they are forced to reject, their rejection will be final. If they are able to accept, there is every prospect that Parliament and the people will ratify their acceptance. In another way, also, the debate had valuable results. The Prime Minister's language to the supporters of the resolution was moderate and even conciliatory. He could not accept their despairing views, but he realised that they had expressed—no doubt, in an exaggerated form—the uneasiness of many thousands of Britons who want an Irish settlement, but fear that it may be bought at too great a price. On this point his speech was definite and reassuring. He told the House, explicitly, that no settlement was possible which would not keep Ireland within the Empire, and that the Republican claim to independence could not be admitted in any shape or form. He told it, implicitly, by his use of the word "dishonour," that in the course of settlement no pledge to which the King and Parliament had set their names would be broken. In the same speech Mr. Lloyd George confirmed North-East Ulster's rights under the Government of Ireland Act by promising that the powers which are still withheld from the Northern Parliament would be transferred to it during the present session.

The speech furnishes no clue to the fate of the Conference, but it must add fervour to our prayers that this final and fateful effort for peace may not fail. The Prime Minister did not shirk reference to the inevitable consequences of failure. He declared that, if Ireland could not be kept within the Empire by agreement, she must be kept there by force. That is a dreadful prospect—dreadful, Mr. Lloyd George pointed out, for Great Britain, and still more dreadful for Ireland. The lives of hundreds—perhaps, thousands—of young Irishmen and Englishmen, Irish trade and industry, all the courses of Ireland's social and intellectual development are in the hands of the men who are now negotiating at Downing street. It is a tremendous responsibility, and yesterday's debate is a timely warning to the delegates themselves, to Parliament, and to the people of both countries. Parliament is warned against the danger of any attempt to impair the prospects of settlement by undue curiosity or hasty criticism. The Irish people are warned that, if their delegates persist in impossible claims, such measures as the British Government may decide to adopt will have the full support of a united Parliament and a united nation. Peace can come only by way of compromise, of sacrifice in non-essentials, of trust that good-will, born of new and closer associations, may solve, sooner or later, problems that seem insoluble to-day. It is every Irishman's duty at this solemn hour to count the cost of a failure which would inflict ruin on every national interest—a ruin that would refuse to recognise any principle of partition. A real settlement is an equally vital necessity for North and South.

The American Debt.

Mr. Reginald McKenna's speech in Chicago, in which he dealt with the question of debts and reparations from the financier's point of view, has set the United States to talking again about the money owed to it by Great Britain. Mr. McKenna did not intimate that the British debt to the United States should be remitted, except by implication that its collection would be injurious to American trade. The American public, however, is very touchy about this debt and over-ready to construe any utterance by a responsible British financier as a proposal that the indebtedness shall be wiped out. As the war progressed the American people became firmly of the opinion that the end would find the United States a monopolist of the world's trade, the world's shipping, and the world's gold. None of these hopes has been realised. The average American does not understand what has happened; but he is being told that Great Britain, in some mysterious way, has got the better of the United States, and so he is determined that, whatever else happens, he will have that thousand million pounds. The American Government would be glad to remit the debt from Britain, who was an endorser rather than the actual payee of this gigantic promissory note; and American financiers take the same view. The American public, however, means to have the money. In these circumstances Britain can only demean herself by doing anything except prepare to pay up, look pleasant, and—if an Anglo-American entente is really sought—try to feel pleasant.

A Novel Strike.

Hitherto Britain has been the home of the strike. British workers invented it, and our trade unionists have reason to be proud of the ingenuity with which they have applied it to almost every branch of industrial and social activity. Now the Germans have stolen a march on them by the discovery of quite a new kind of strike. Last week a Communist agitator paid a visit to one of the Berlin Labour Exchanges for purposes of propaganda. The officials promptly ejected him, whereupon the unemployed who were drawing their doles from this particular bureau and using its services in their hunt for jobs declared a "strike," and put the bureau under a ban. A deadlock resulted, and the movement quickly spread throughout the city. As a result the elaborate Labour organisation of the German capital has been thrown completely out of gear, and employers of labour are at their wits' end to find men for vacant posts. The municipal authorities have opened negotiations with the strikers' leaders in order to persuade them to go back to official unemployment. The whole business shows to what extremes of absurdity the strike movement can be pushed. More, perhaps, by good luck than good guidance Britain so far has escaped Berlin's nonsensical experience; but, in view of its past record, we fear that British Labour is capable of anything.

Dock Thieves.

A year ago the pilfering evil was rampant at every port in the world. It is on record that at New York a whole cargo of flour vanished in the course of a single night and that a grand piano which was shipped from London to Sydney never reached its destination. Insurance rates increased by leaps and bounds, and in some cases the cost of a policy almost equalled the value of the articles insured. Now, thanks to the vigilance of the police, who have laid several organised gangs of dock thieves by the heels, and to a stricter system of tallying cargoes in and out of ships, the evil has abated. It has been reported to the Manchester Association of Exporters and Importers that in one case where the ships' officers undertook the duty of checking every bale in the cargoes the annual losses through pilfering fell by ninety per cent. Other shipping companies have had a similar experience. Strange though it may seem, the improvement has been most marked at Constantinople and the Piræus. The docks of London, Liverpool, New York, and Sydney are still infested by scores of thieves who carry on their "trade" with apparent impunity. Can it be that the Turkish and Greek authorities are more alert than those who control the world's greatest ports?

Law-breakers.

The habit of attending football matches has become so prevalent in these islands that most people have lost sight of the fact that it is an illegal practice, and that by watching a football match they render themselves liable to a fine and even imprisonment. The secret has been revealed by Colonel C. D. Crisp, a director of the Woolwich Arsenal Club. Football, it appears, was invented in 217 A.D., when the conquering Anglo-Saxons kicked the heads of the Danes about the English streets; but official reference to the game is not made until 1175. Then it was so popular that it lured schoolboys and apprentices from their work. Naturally, it came under the ban of the powers that were, and a series of Acts of Parliament was passed against it. The last Act, imposing a penalty on anyone who might attend a football match, was passed in the reign of James I., and never has been repealed. More than half a million people in England alone watch football matches every Saturday, and quite a respectable addition to the revenue might be made by the enforcement of this forgotten Act. Here is an opportunity for the Chancellor of the Exchequer to replenish his coffers; but we should feel sorry for him if he attempted to take it.

COURT AND PERSONAL.

BUCKINGHAM PALACE, MONDAY.

The King and Queen, attended by the Lady Elizabeth Dawson, Captain Sir Charles Cust, Bart., R.N., and Colonel Clive Wigram, arrived at the Palace this morning from York Cottage, Sandringham.

The King held a Council at 1 o'clock p.m. There were present:—The Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, M.P. (Lord President); the Earl of Desart, the Lord Colebrooke (Captain of His Majesty's Body Guard of the Honourable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms), and the Lord Somerleyton (Lord-in-Waiting). Sir Almeric FitzRoy was in attendance as Clerk of the Council.

The Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, M.P., had an audience of the King previous to the Council, and the Earl of Desart had an audience of His Majesty after the Council.

Brigadier-General the Earl of Lucan (Lord-in-Waiting), the Master of the Household (Major Philip Hunloke), and Captain Sir Charles Cust, Bart., R.N. (Groom and Equerry-in-Waiting), and the Deputy Master of the Household were in attendance.

The Archbishop of York was fifty-seven yesterday.

The death of the Earl of Ducie, which occurred on the 28th ult. at Tortworth Court, Gloucestershire, makes yet another blank in the group of veteran peers sitting in the House of Lords. His brother, the Hon. Algernon Moreton, who died in 1880, lived for a considerable time in County Carlow, and was one of the active promoters of the Suir, Nore, and Barrow Protection Association, which did much to preserve the salmon fishing in the South of Ireland.

Kathleen Viscountess Falmouth, the Hon. Pamela Boscawen, Sir John Campbell, and Sir Robert and Lady Aitken have left England for Bombay. The Countess of Kimberley and Lord Wodehouse are staying at Brighton. Admiral Sir Mostyn Field is taking the cure at Bath.

Lord Dunsany presided on Sunday at the dinner given by the O.P. Club at the Hotel Cecil to celebrate the "coming of age" of the Club. Among those present were Lord Leverhulme, Lord Willoughby de Broke, Lord Dewar, Sir Edgar and Lady Sanders, Mr. Lewis Casson, and Miss Sybil Thorndyke, whose health was proposed by Lord Dunsany.

Among recently announced engagements is that of Lieutenant John Falls, R.N., only son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Falls, of Lislap, Co. Tyrone, and Miss Godelena Twysden, second daughter of the late Captain J. S. Twysden, R.N., and Mrs. Twysden, Churston House, Kingsbridge, Devonshire.

The marriage arranged between Captain W. Julian Odlum, M.C. (late Royal Artillery), and Miss Dolly Bamford will take place, quietly, at the residence of the bride's parents, in Belfast, on November 10th, by special licence.

THE DUBLIN PAINTERS.

VARIED AUTUMN SHOW.

Only seven artists contribute to the Dublin Painters' autumn show, which will be open for the next four weeks at 7 St. Stephen's Green. Three of them may be briefly dismissed. Miss Letitia Hamilton's "White Foam" has a sincere, quiet charm of its own—careful, honest work. Miss Swanzy has a picture of blue sea, with a huddling range of distant mountains beyond, seen through the trunks of gnarled trees, with branches unnaturally thick-set, such as grow in the windiest places, and there is brilliancy and a sense of living air. Miss Marsh is a teacher, and her canvases look as if they were painted for a demonstration—how to do an avenue, for instance; and all painted on the same day without changing the palette.

But the other four exhibitors are the strongest in the group, and are seen at their best. Mr. Jack Yeats belongs to nobody but himself. There is no charm in the medium through which he expresses himself: there is even a clumsiness. But there is personality, there is power, there is vision—no delight in colour, but delight in life. He has always been in love with a primitive type of the virile, and his group of longshore seamen somewhere in the West of Ireland are the unhurried, unmodernised creatures that he has always preferred. The bay and hill beyond them are bound up in the same way of life, the group and its surroundings are one. Another canvas that shows a fiddler in the middle of a crowd at Croke Park might seem depressing and squalid; but the people in the crowd do not feel it so, and Mr. Yeats's observation of their pleasure is like a good chapter in a Russian novel.

* * * * * *

Mr. O'Rourke Dickey, now, is a painter first, last, and all the time. His picture of Newcastle, in County Down, renders a complicated landscape with absolute mastery of drawing. There is a Dutch precision in the treatment of trees in the belt of wood half-way up the hill-slope; yet the transition from detail to mass is perfectly graduated, and the justice of his values gets the long recession of hills to the right exactly. Yet for what does he employ his art? He conveys no sense of pleasure in the obvious beauty; if anything has appealed to him by its charm, it is the line of road at the upper edge of the town, indicated by its houses. He seems to follow it with a pleasure in its undulation, as if it were the cadence of the sonnet. Yet is it simply because by it he can give so completely the structure of the ground? He seems to paint just for the purpose of setting down exactly what he sees, seen just as anyone else might have seen it—except that he has a tendency to see through blue spectacles. However, the noble picture of Malta, which is his other exhibit, is free from this unpleasant quality of colour, which is, therefore, not inherent in Mr. Dickey's make-up. But of all painters he is the most objective: he tells us nothing about himself; all he seeks after is a stark reproduction of facts, whether they turn out sunny or grim as a railway junction.

Mr. Paul Henry is not so reticent. Nature excites him; the rougher its expression the better he likes it. Three of his four pictures represent storm, and even in the Achill day of sunshine which he has painted the interest centres in huge swirling masses of cloud which boil up from the horizon. His other oil painting, "The West Wind," is entirely unlike any of the score of canvases that he has shown this year in the same gallery, and finer than any of them. It is simply a group of poplars in autumn on a bare common swung by a gale into a shape that unites the whole; but what rhythm, what beauty in the design of this tall upright composition and what character in the trees! Yet one of his charcoal drawings can equal it: a single ash tree standing up naked and white in a fierce storm, its boughs tortured and wrenched, its trunk bent, rigid yet elastic, straining at its grip of the ground. Mr. Henry's sombre temperament does not need colour for its expression: master of form that he is, he can rival his paint in black and white—yet, perhaps, only because his loose and free handling of charcoal suggests colour all the time. Another of the drawings is a perfectly admirable portrait. Why does not Mr. Henry do more of them?

* * * * * *

Mrs. Henry's contribution to the show is the most numerous and varied. Apart from her two water-colours (which will annoy all except those who like them exceedingly), she has four oil paintings—one of a lady who sits Turk-fashion in a field sketching with supple, harmonious, and beautiful hands. Another is an adorable little picture of that rare sight, curraghs under sail. But the popular success of the exhibition will probably be "The Old Coachman"—so like a study by Sir James Barrie in its mixture of humour and affection. The blue eyes, a little faded by age, are kind and gentle, yet have in and about them that naive confidence in their own wisdom which only those possess who deal in horses. Summary, almost rough, handling suits the informality of the livery: a button is missing from the coat. All the man is in this little masterpiece, as well as the charm of colour that is Mrs. Henry's own. "The Half Light" conveys something much less simple. A girl sits at her toilet table before a window through which a twilight sky is seen: a candle burns dim against it. But she is not looking into her mirror; she looks, and you by some trick are forced to look with her, into the dimness. Her hand on the table has not the inertness of sleep, yet it suggests the pause of physical consciousness: she is gazing at something that is not seen. For those who feel it, "The Half Light," over and above its loveliness of colour, will have an uncanny beauty that would gain assuredly if the picture were seen alone.

SALAMANCA AND ITS UNIVERSITY.

CITY OF DEPARTED GLORIES.

Salamanca has more of the old-world look about it than any other city in Spain; as we walk along its tortuous, narrow streets, with their rough cobble-stones, we find that it is much the same in appearance as when in the 16th and 17th centuries crowds of students from all countries in Europe came to swell the population.

Salamanca owed all its importance to its University, and when the University declined the town declined. But the traveller in Spain, foredone by our stress of civilisation, must bless the fortune which stopped the modernisation of the city. The only other towns in Europe which give such an impression of mediæval University life are Padua or Bologna, and there is much in Salamanca that reminds one of Bologna. Both were the centres to which all the Universities in Europe sent their students to receive a finishing education.

* * * * * *

Salamanca University was founded in 1230 by Alfonso IX. of Leon, but it was St. Ferdinand of Castile who really started it on its career of importance. Alfonso X. and his successors in Castile granted many favours to the University, and made it famous for its schools of canon law; but it was during the rule of the "Catholic Kings" that we notice kingly interference in the affairs of learning, and it was at Salamanca that many of the ideas of the new Renaissance were first discussed. Gradually its schools of law attracted students from Paris and Bologna, and many were the Irishmen who listened in the lecture rooms to the wonderful discourses by scholars such as Fray Luis De Leon and Perez De Oliva.

In the 15th and 16th centuries Salamanca University was famous throughout Europe. Here Columbus lectured on his discoveries in America before an audience of scholars; here the Copernican system was taught long before the rest of Europe was willing to accept it. During the 16th century, after Charles V. and Philip II. had sent Visitors to the University who made additional statutes giving more scope to religious teaching, Salamanca became the centre of the Catholic world for theology.

It is also interesting to know that it was owing to the great King Philip II. that the seminary for Irish nobles was founded, for during this century there was continued intercourse between Ireland and Spain. It was only three years after Philip had sent his invincible Armada to England that Trinity College was founded in 1591 by his arch enemy, Elizabeth.

* * * * * *

During the 17th century we begin to notice the decline of the University, perhaps because in all Europe during that century, owing to the innumerable religious wars, there was a general lowering of the standard of culture in Europe; the effect of the Renaissance was beginning to wear off.

This decline increased all through the 17th century and the first half of the 18th century; even the renewed vigour of University life which manifested itself in the second half of the 18th century was not enough to bring it back to its ancient glory. Then came the War of Independence, when the French troops, who occupied the city from 1809 to 1812, ravaged many of its artistic buildings, and when they had left it was left a prey to the political banderias.

It was the students themselves by their lawlessness in the town who contributed largely to the ruin of their University—for scarcely a day passed when there was not a battle between them and the townspeople in the narrow streets. They would not recognise the authority of the Rector, and made life so difficult that it was only when the University declined altogether that there was peace in the city. Nowadays the lecture halls are scantily filled, and nearly all the students are medicals—in the literary class this year there are under twenty candidates.

It is sad to sit in the Cátedra of Fray Luis De Leon, the man who did so much to advance the Spanish language, and reflect on the past glories. On all the walls outside we see initials painted roughly in red—they were the initials of former students who had passed their doctorate. The glory of Salamanca is no more, but its yellow stones tell us of the times when its pupils made Spain the greatest country in the world.

LONDON LETTER.

EFFECT OF PREMIER'S SPEECH.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
MONDAY NIGHT.

To the House of Commons in the main, including the great majority of the Unionist Party, the Prime Minister's speech was abundantly satisfactory as justifying the carrying on of the Conference with the representatives of Sinn Fein. It was felt, however, that no strong conclusion favourable to the result of the Conference could be drawn from the right hon. gentleman's observations, and, in the circumstances, approval was all the more cordial of his declaration that, should it prove necessary in spite of the utmost endeavours to secure peace, the Government would adopt the strongest possible measures to maintain the honour of Britain and the security of the Empire. The continuance of Southern Ireland within the Empire and the safeguarding of Ulster seem to be fully indicated in this declaration.

Many of those who heard the speech were inclined to read between the lines of the peroration a suggestion that the Prime Minister and his colleagues are likely to make an appeal to the country for support should it prove that the Irish situation calls for a revival of stern measures. He has hitherto, however, made no more definite statement on this subject than that the authority of Parliament would be asked.

SYMPATHY, BUT NO VOTE.

The promoters of the resolution of censure declare themselves to be satisfied with the outcome of their action. They maintain that the majority of the Unionists gave their sympathy, if not their vote, and urge that the Prime Minister failed to justify the offer of such wide terms to the Sinn Feiners.

The Ulster members were perfectly satisfied with the assurance given by the Prime Minister that, if the powers necessary to the Government of Northern Ireland are not transferable to it otherwise within the next few days, special legislation will be promoted during the session to secure the transfer. In the circumstances these members, who represented at the moment 16 or 17 votes, decided to take no part in the division. The powers referred to include those relating to police, education, local government, agriculture, trade, and commerce.

A Cabinet Council is to be held to-morrow morning, and it is quite possible that a meeting of the Irish Conference will follow during the day. For some unknown reason there was rather a revival of optimism concerning the Conference in political circles, and no immediate rupture of the negotiations is now expected. In Sinn Fein circles hopes have been maintained all through the week-end that the Conference would resume its sittings and continue its work.

AN OPTIMISTIC VIEW.

The Pall Mall Gazette announced this evening that it was in a position to announce that the prospects of an Irish settlement have almost unexpectedly become much brighter. Whatever happens in the House of Commons to-night, the Prime Minister and his colleagues will meet the Sinn Fein delegates to-morrow and continue the negotiations from the stage which was reached last week, with every hope of success. Since the day when Mr. de Valera's message to the Pope was discussed by the Conference and Mr. M. Collins paid a hurried visit to Dublin much has taken place which, for the moment, cannot be disclosed; but the fact remains that, despite all statements to the contrary, there has been such a marked approach towards final settlement that Ministers decline to admit the possibility of a breakdown.

Mr. Lloyd George, it is believed—the story continues—would announce in his speech to-night that the real crisis has been passed; but the conditions with regard to secrecy which the Conference imposed upon itself may prevent the Prime Minister from going as far as that, or stating that the crucial question of allegiance has been composed. That this has been achieved is accepted in well informed quarters. Unless, therefore, there are wholly unexpected developments, an agreed Irish peace will eventually be reached on the basis of Ireland within the Empire.

The Prime Minister has nearly, but not quite, abandoned the hope of leaving for Washington on Saturday next; but in his circle it is thought to be highly improbable that he will be able to carry out his intended plans. If he cannot get away next Saturday, he will go at the earliest possible moment, for he has firmly made up his mind to attend the Disarmament Conference.

WASHINGTON.

Mr. Bonar Law has been taking considerable interest during the past few days in the political situation, as well as playing some vigorous lawn tennis at the Queen's Club courts. He has had no official part in the discussions that have taken place, but his former colleagues have been consulting him in an unofficial manner. It goes without saying that the late leader of the Unionist Party is still a great figure in the political world, and, should his recovery continue, he may soon take a big place in the House of Commons again.

A White Paper was issued this afternoon, in continuation of one published some weeks ago, containing the further correspondence relating to the proposals of His Majesty's Government for an Irish settlement. The correspondence includes the series of telegrams which ended in the acceptance by Mr. de Valera of the Prime Minister's invitation.

BY-ELECTION CRY.

"Anti-waste" was always an artificial cry for by-elections, and it seems that it is now likely to be dropped altogether. At Hornsey, where Lord Ednam is the candidate, it has been decided that "Anti-waste" will catch no votes, so Lord Ednam goes to the poll simply as a Conservative. Consequently it is probable that the contest will be a straight issue between the old-fashioned policies of Conservatism and Liberalism, and, if so, it will be a forecast of the future, for events point to a resumption of elementary politics again. Once Ireland has a settlement and is at peace, the term "Unionist" will have little reason for survival, and politics will once again tend to become domestic.

The King and Queen returned to London to-day, and the Court will remain here for some weeks, probably until it leaves London for Christmas. The King, however, is expected to go to Elveden for the shooting next week for a day or two.

Little notice was taken in the City to-day of the Soviet Government's request for recognition by the Great Powers, and offering in return immediate signature of a Peace Treaty, with an acknowledgment of the debts to the rest of Europe. It would considerably ease a very difficult financial position, but the sum necessary to pay the interest alone would amount to many millions, and the Soviet Government could not easily find them. Really, there is not much in the Russian proposal, for the promises are backed by nothing solid, and the real pivot of the situation remains. Russia must become a producer, and recognise the laws of contract, before she can hope to regain her trade and prosperity. Until that day comes recognition is of little value, and in the City of London it carries no weight at all.

A meeting of Union Postal workers representing officials of Counties Cavans, Fermanagh, and Monaghan yesterday passed resolutions protesting against any arrangement for the settlement of the Irish question whereby Irish post offices would be placed under dual control, as it would be detrimental to the efficiency of a great public institution, and urging the consolidation of wages and bonuses.

PREMIER'S TRIUMPH.

SWEEPING MAJORITY FOR PEACE

CONFERENCE POLICY VINDICATED

CONDITIONS OF SETTLEMENT.

Last night's debate upon the vote of censure in the Commons was dominated by the Premier's powerful plea for a continuance of the Irish peace negotiations.

Mr. Lloyd George disposed easily of his opponents' arguments. He made a weighty and impressive case. The alternative to an agreed peace was guerilla war, and they had seen in the South African campaign how costly and how terrible a thing that was.

The Premier promised Captain Craig that the Northern Irish Government's difficulty would be dealt with, and that, if necessary, a small Act would be introduced to regularise its position in regard to the transferred services.

In the result there voted for the censure motion 43, against it 439—a Government majority of 396.

DEBATE IN BRIEF.

FROM GRAVE TO GAY.

(FROM OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, Monday Night.

The prospect of a debate on the Irish policy of the Government attracted a very large audience to the House of Commons. In the Peers' Gallery were, with others, Lord FitzAlan, Lord Aberdeen, Lord Glenavy (late Lord Chancellor of Ireland), Lord MacDonnell, Lord Desart, Lord Oranmore and Browne, Lord Pirrie, and Lord Armaghdale.

There were a number of questions relating to Ireland on the Order Paper.

Mr. Chamberlain said that every complaint of interference with property was taken up with the representatives of Sinn Fein, as that was the best way, in the Government's opinion, to secure redress, and at the same time to maintain peace.

Sir Hamar Greenwood stated that arrangements had been made to afford relief, so far as the available money would go, to others in addition to Crown servants who had been given awards. But he expressed the view that some of those awards were exaggerated in amount.

After the Speaker had ruled out of order Lord Robert Cecil's proposed amendment to the motion, Colonel Gretton rose shortly before four o'clock to move his motion. He apologised for his lack of oratorical ability, and his matter was certainly a good deal better than his manner. The staple of his speech was that the Prime Minister, in entering into negotiations, had eaten his own words and reversed his policy. Both he and the seconder (Mr. Gwynne) made innumerable quotations from Mr. Lloyd George's past speeches, many of them very difficult to reconcile with his present attitude.

ULSTER'S ATTITUDE.

NO PART IN THE DIVISION.

An effective speech was made by Captain Craig, Lord Carson's successor as leader of the Irish Unionists in the House of Commons. Its purpose was to urge that the Northern Parliament should be released from the control of Dublin Castle, and given the powers that were necessary to enable it to function. As to the motion on the paper, the Ulster members considered that they were not directly concerned in the negotiations, and, therefore, would not take part in the division.

Sir S. Hoare thought that the Irish administration of the Government had been deplorable, and he recalled the attempt of himself and his friends to get the scope of the Government of Ireland Bill widened. Now the Government were offering far more than they refused a year ago. Nevertheless, he believed that the loyalists in Southern Ireland wished the negotiations to go on. But he stipulated for an assurance that any settlement should provide for naval supremacy, no separation of allegiance to the Crown, and no coercion of Ulster. "We Conservatives," he said, "might be satisfied with that."

He was followed by another of the signatories, Mr. Wilson Fox, who, beginning very mildly, proceeded to accuse the Chief Secretary of "deplorable lack of candour," and warned the Prime Minister that if he "savaged his own friends," he would lose the invaluable support of the flower of the Unionist Army.

Mr. Arthur Henderson is not usually regarded as a humorist, but he managed to keep the House in fits of laughter for several minutes by reading out a letter of Mr. William O'Brien, describing the wonderful transformation produced in Ireland as the result of the truce. When he came to the passage in which the writer wondered "how we have stumbled into this blessed state of things," members fairly roared.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT'S WARNING.

Even the Prime Minister joined in the merriment, and when, a few moments later, he rose to reply he began by saying that he was not going to claim a vote of confidence for the Government on the strength of Mr. O'Brien's idyllic picture.

After some friendly chaff of the mover and seconder, who had presented their case "temperately and, on the whole, skilfully," and a tribute to the German Government for giving warning of an intended gun-running, he turned to Captain Craig, and assured him that, unless something happened in the next few days, the powers necessary to enable the Northern Government to function would be transferred to it before the end of the present session.

He then dealt with the charges that the Government ought to have consulted Parliament before going into conference, and ought not to have conferred at all with the present delegates. No business, he maintained, was ever done at an open conference, and there was no use in conferring with people who could not "deliver the goods."

The really important question was the cost of the alternative policy, and he dwelt with, perhaps, almost too much stress on the difficulties of guerrilla warfare. Still, "if the people of this country are convinced that it must be done, it can be done, and will be done." But he hinted that it would entail a dissolution, and, perhaps, a change of Government, and he hoped that the House would give them authority to persist in their efforts to get "the two parent races of these islands"—a new phrase that—to make up their age-long differences.

CHARGE OF DESERTION.

Later in the debate Mr. Jellett complained of the manner in which the Southern Unionists had been deserted.

A vigorous reply was delivered by Lord Winterton, who said that the desertion took place at the General Election of 1918. He thought it was wise to let the Conference now go to an issue, either of success or failure.

Mr. Clynes protested against the suggestion that the Labour Party was lacking in patriotism, but said that allegiance could not be forced upon Ireland by the rifle.

Sir F. Banbury retorted with the reminder that in 1907 Mr. Birrell found Ireland more peaceful and prosperous than it had been for 600 years. Why had not the Government insisted on the surrender of arms before entering into a truce? After recalling the details of various outrages, he declared that it was impossible to enter into negotiations with the persons responsible for these things.

The House filled for Mr. Chamberlain's winding-up speech. Among others who entered was Sir Eric Geddes, who greatly enjoyed his leader's criticism of Sir F. Banbury. The Lord Chancellor, for the second time within a week, paid a visit to the Peers' Gallery.

The Leader of the House was very severe with the critics of the Conference and of the truce. Whenever these deplorable, almost disastrous, breaches of the truce occurred they were referred to the delegates, who had acted in these matters as men of honour. He begged the House not to ruin the chance of peace by impatience, and he deprecated Sir S. Hoare's request that he should repeat undertakings already given. He claimed that Mr. Asquith's approval of the Government's present action showed that they had reached rock-bottom in their proposals.

The division was taken at 11.

Great cheers greeted the announcement of the numbers.

MOVING THE VOTE.

CHARGES SET FORTH.

Colonel Gretton moved:—

"That this House views with grave apprehension the action of the Government in entering into negotiations with delegates from Southern Ireland, who have taken an oath of allegiance to an Irish Republic, and have repudiated the authority of the Crown, and in view of the fact that an Act of Parliament for the settlement of the relations between Great Britain and Ireland was passed as recently as last year, is of opinion that no proposals for the government of Southern Ireland should be made without the sanction of Parliament."

Colonel Gretton, on rising, was received with cheers and counter-cheers, mingled with derisive cries from the Labour members.

He thanked the Government for giving the House an opportunity of debating the Irish question. Such a debate was long overdue. (Hear, hear.) The House and the country had been kept in darkness, and desired to hear what had been going on. The Government had not chosen to regard the motion in that simple manner. The Prime Minister had flung down a challenge, and declared that it was a vote of no confidence in the Government. He desired a division. If that was the determination of the Government, let it be so.

He and his friends were not going to run away from their convictions, and if the Government desired a division, and the certain majority they would take into the lobby, let them have it. They had already assured themselves of a large majority, because Mr. Asquith's party, without waiting for the debate, had already declared their intention of supporting the Government, and, with equal precipitancy, the Labour Party had made the same decision.

INSULT TO THE CROWN.

MR. DE VALERA'S MESSAGE.

Mr. de Valera's message to the Pope was a telegram of defiance—(cheers)—insulting to the Crown. It had never been withdrawn. They could not settle the question of allegiance by an ingenious formula. (Cheers.) The success of the Conference had been hopeless from the beginning. The differences between the two sides were fundamental. Were the Government proposing to hand over Ireland to the murder gang? It was with representatives of that gang that the Government were now negotiating. It was impossible to tamper with or vary the terms of the oath of allegiance.

Under the present Government the situation in Ireland had gone steadily from bad to worse, and they had ended by surrendering to gangs of assassins with whom, they declared, they would never associate. England had never before suffered such a humiliation. (Cheers.) Was the Government defeated? The British people were not defeated. (Cheers.)

The Government had never asked them to see this business through. The terror of the gunmen had spread to Downing street. The British people were not to be terrorised by any conspiracy into bartering away the safety of their country. What were the Government going to do when the Conference broke up unsuccessful? No one had confidence in their present Irish policy. If there was to be peace in Ireland other ways would have to be found.

Mr. Rupert Gwynne, in seconding, said that the Government seemed to have reached the depths of degeneration.

They had no objection to the Conference qua Conference, provided Parliament was consulted. What they did take exception to was the men with whom the Government were conferring, and the manner in which the Conference was being conducted. They were negotiating with the Commander-in-Chief of a murder gang, subsidised by foreign money, with the object of smashing the British Empire. Did the Prime Minister think these men really wanted peace? That was not what they were being paid for by foreign Bolshevists. The Chief Secretary had charged Mr. Asquith with encouraging rebels in Ireland, but they must give the devil his dues. (Cheers.) Mr. Asquith had the decency to go to Ireland and see his friends in gaol. Mr. Lloyd George liberated them, and invited them to Downing street.

The House ought to know what safeguards there were before the Conference proceeded. If it proceeded on its present basis, the loyalists in the South would be sacrificed.

ULSTER'S COMPLAINT.

Captain Charles Craig said that it was the first time he had addressed the House in an important debate since he had been elected the Leader of the Irish Unionists in that House. Sir Edward Carson, who preceded him in that office, was accustomed to put the Ulster case before the House with so much clearness and logic that it was only those who were determined not to be convinced who were not converted by his arguments.

The Ulster Unionists complained that, although the Government had given Ulster a Parliament, it was not supplied with the necessary authority to enable them to carry out their duties. Everything appeared at first to be going on in a satisfactory way, but, unfortunately, things had come to a stand-still because the Government had not transferred to the Parliament the powers necessary to make it a reality. Without these powers that Parliament was absolutely impotent, and little more than a sham.

The Government of Ulster at present was being conducted on money borrowed from the bank. One or two Acts had been passed and received the Royal assent, but, if Acts were passed that required Executive administration, action could not be taken.

CONTROL OF POLICE.

HOW ORDER IS AFFECTED.

This happened in the case of the police. The police in Belfast were under the control of an alien institution—namely, Dublin Castle, which was, in the view of 95 per cent. of the people of Ulster, absolutely hostile to the Ulster Parliament, and would be pleased if that Parliament was a complete failure. The loyalists were constantly calling upon the Ulster Government to suppress the riots in Belfast, but there was the humiliating spectacle that the Parliament could only stand by impotent. That was illogical, and most hon. members would agree that it was intolerable.

In every department of the Government there was the same condition of matters. He, therefore, appealed to the Prime Minister to hand over these powers to the Ulster Parliament at the earliest possible moment. The Government's defence for the delay, he thought, was that to give Ulster these powers would require action under the Government of Ireland Act, which, if taken, would have irritated the Sinn Feiners and jeopardised the chances of agreement at the Conference. Ulster's case against that was that the Government charged with the government of the country was absolutely impotent.

CONFERENCE LIMITS.

The Ulster members did not propose to discuss further the merits or demerits of the Conference. They did that as a settled policy. From the beginning the Ulster Government had taken up the position that the Conference was a matter which did not vitally concern them. They looked upon it as one entirely between the British Government and Sinn Fein. Their sympathies with their fellow-countrymen were acute, but they must look at this question from the point of view of how it affected Ulster. They had decided to take no part in the division on the question before the House, provided always that they had every hope that they would get a satisfactory answer from the Government with reference to the transfer of the powers which they required.

The Ulster members could not bring themselves—at any rate, they were very reluctant—to vote in an opposite lobby from the hon. members who were associated with the motion, among whom were the best friends that Ulster had in that House. (Cheers.)

Sir S. Hoare agreed with a good deal of the case made out by the supporters of the motion. The Irish administration of the last twelve months had been deplorable. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Wilson Fox supported the motion, but disclaimed any hostility to the Government.

Mr. A. Henderson considered the debate as being distinctly in the nature of a family quarrel. There was nothing inconsistent in the Labour Party's supporting the Government on that occasion. They were strongly in favour of negotiation, and they would give the Government unqualified support until the Government had had a fair opportunity of carrying the Conference to a successful conclusion. The Cabinet had responded to the King's Belfast appeal for reconciliation, and those who did not support the Cabinet took upon themselves a heavy responsibility.

There had been a wonderful transformation in the condition of Ireland. Mr. William O'Brien, an ex-M.P., said that it was perfectly tranquil, happy, and contented. (Ironical cheers and laughter.) There was, however, an increasing distrust of British statesmen among all classes.

NEGOTIATIONS DEFENDED.

ULSTER'S CLAIM TO BE MET.

PRIME MINISTER'S SPEECH.

Mr. Lloyd George, replying to the mover and seconder of the vote of censure, said:—I need hardly assure the House of Commons that I am not going to claim a vote of confidence for the Government to-night on the ground of the idyllic picture of Mr. William O'Brien as quoted by Mr. Henderson. I have always had great respect for Mr. William O'Brien's gifts, but I never admired his imagination more than I do on this occasion. All the same, I am very grateful to my right hon. friend that he did not give us any more quotations of the same kind.

It has been assumed that when I invited this discussion on Thursday last it was in order to attack some hon. friends of mine who had ventured to differ from the Government on the policy which they had adopted. Let me assure the House and my hon. friends that that was not my object in the least. A very grave issue had been raised as to proceedings which have been conducted by the Government. It was quite clear that there was a section of members of the House, who have given very loyal support to the Government in the main, who were full of misgivings with regard to this particular action, and I felt that it was essential that the situation should be cleared up as soon as possible, so that we should know what the view of the House of Commons was on the policy which we were pursuing.

CASE STATED SKILFULLY.

My hon. friends to-night have stated their case. They have stated it temperately and with courtesy, and, on the whole, skilfully. My hon. friend who moved the resolution stated his case quite calmly and clearly. My hon. friend who followed him, when he got away from The Chequers—(laughter)—also stated his case quite frankly; but he was rather worried about that.

He thought I had gone down to The Chequers to acquire muscular strength to wrestle with him. (Laughter.)

My hon. friend who stated the case, apart from the merits, thought that the present Government at any rate was not the Government to make peace, because we had been guilty of shedding blood, but the point of his speech was that we had not shed nearly enough. (Cheers.) Besides, I was rather perplexed when he said that at any rate David should not build the Temple of Peace. (Laughter.) Which of his friends he had marked out for the position of Solomon he did not say.

NOT GERMANE.

BREACHES OF THE TRUCE.

Now, as I understand my hon. friend's case, there was a good deal of material which was not germane to the resolution before the House. I might discuss breaches of the truce. There have been breaches of the truce on both sides. I complained myself of some of them. They have been investigated, and, in so far as they could be put right, they have been put right. We received guarantees which, I think, they are doing their best to carry out. The difficulties are great on both sides. But we have received distinct guarantees. For instance, we had evidence, not that arms were being landed in Ireland, but that preparations were being made for landing arms in Ireland.

The evidence was attributable to the action of the German Government, and it is right that that should be stated in this House. When the evidence was forthcoming we received a distinct undertaking that during the truce no arms would be landed in Ireland at all. I only want to make that statement generally, because it would be obviously impossible to go into these cases on a motion which deals with one particular issue, on which the judgment of the House is to be obtained.

I, therefore, move away to deal with the case raised by the hon. member for South Antrim. I congratulate him on his first appearance as the leader of the Ulster Unionist Party, and I can understand the trepidation he felt when he followed such a very distinguished and such a great Parliamentarian. (Hear, hear.) But I think it will be the feeling of the House that he acquitted himself with great skill. (Hear, hear.) My hon. friend has asked a specific question, and he is entitled to an answer, and I propose to dispose of that before I come to the motion.

NORTHERN PARLIAMENT.

He says—"You set up a Parliament in Northern Ireland. There are certain powers which must be transferred to it before you can make that Parliament operate—make it effective." But my hon. friend knows perfectly well that those powers were to be conferred on the two Parliaments simultaneously. If the Southern Parliament did not come into existence there was something in the nature of Crown Colony Government to be set up. Then the powers were to be conferred simultaneously upon the Crown Colony and the Ulster Parliament.

These negotiations were interposed. We had not deemed it advisable to set up Crown Colony Government until we knew how these negotiations would eventuate. But I can quite see that that is paralysing the necessary activities of the Ulster Government.

RIGHTING MATTERS.

SHORT ACT POSSIBLE.

I think the position is intolerable to the Northern Parliament. Therefore, unless something happens in the course of the next few days one way or the other that puts the position right from the point of view of the Act, we shall either exercise the powers we have got—and in that matter we are obtaining the opinion of the Attorney-General—or confer the necessary powers upon the Northern Parliament, or ask the House of Commons during the present session to pass a short Act dealing with the matter. (Cheers.) It is unfair to set up a Parliament and deprive it of the only powers that enables it to work creditably, because that is giving an unfair advantage to its enemies.

I now come to the motion. That motion divides itself into two parts. The first part expresses grave apprehension that the Government should have entered into negotiations with men who at the time were engaged in a conspiracy against the authority of the Crown.

The second point is that these negotiations ought to be succeeded by the sanction of Parliament to the proposals made at the time.

The first observation I would make is this—that no pact entered into in the course of these negotiations can come into effect without the authority of Parliament. Every detail will have to be submitted to Parliament. An agreement—if there be an agreement—will have to be converted into the form of an Act of Parliament, and be subjected to first reading, second reading, report stage, and third reading in this House and in the other place. So, therefore, nothing can be done without the full scrutiny and sanction of Parliament. (Cheers.)

IMPOSSIBLE LINES.

It is suggested that we ought to come to the House of Commons and say—"We want your sanction to these proposals," and submit a list of them. No negotiations could possibly be conducted on such lines. I would ask those who have experience in such cases, and support the motion, to realise what that means. If you enter into negotiations, there is the basic principle to be considered, and we have already declared that to the House.

An Hon. Member—What is it?

Mr. Lloyd George—And we shall stand by it. (Cheers.) When you enter into a conference there are always certain things you can adjust—certain things you can give away. Otherwise it is of no use having a conference. I was always in favour of a conference if we could get it.

The next point I make is this—we notified Parliament every step that has been taken. I repeatedly stated that the Government is prepared to meet in discussion any representative of the Irish people, who legitimately represented them—that is, anyone who was in a position to make good a bargain when it was made.

ESSENCE OF THE CASE.

The late Leader of the House and myself received a deputation from trade unions, and we were asked by that Labour deputation whether we were prepared to meet representatives of Sinn Fein. We sat in consultation together, and I said I would meet anyone and discuss terms, provided they were in a position to deliver the goods.

Mr. Rupert Gwynne—Anybody but the murder gang.

Mr. Lloyd George—My hon. friend is absolutely wrong. (Cries of "No.") I never introduced the phrase, and I will come to that in a moment, because that is the very essence of it. I repeatedly stated that I was prepared to meet anyone who could make a bargain on behalf of the population of Ireland.

I made statement after statement on behalf of the Government of this policy, not merely as to my readiness, with my colleagues, to meet representatives of Sinn Fein, but also as to the limitations which were regarded as being imposed on our negotiations.

Then came the letter of July, following His Majesty's gracious speech at Belfast.

At this point Mr. Rupert Gwynne rose to his feet, and, in spite of cries of "Order," and

UNEMPLOYED FUND.

£12,000,000 FROM THE STATE.

FOR IMMEDIATE USE.

The sum to be provided immediately by the State for unemployment is £12,000,000.

In addition, liability is to be assumed for a share of the charges on loans raised by local authorities to meet capital expenditure on public works that are being carried out for the purpose of providing employment in the present emergency.

The scheme of exports credits is to be modified and extended in some respects.

EMIGRATION.

£980,000 FOR FREE PASSAGES.

A supplementary estimate for the Civil Services of a further sum required of £8,022,000, the whole of which is to be devoted to dealing with the present existing unemployment, has just been issued.

The Colonial Office Grant of free passages for oversea settlement is to be increased by £330,000, making a total for the year of £980,000, and the State contribution to the Unemployed Workers' Dependents' Fund accounts for £2,192,000, while the sum to be voted for the relief of unemployment, to be administered by the Ministry of Health, is £5,500,000.

The last-named amount is to be allocated to meet expenditure by way of grants or loans under the direction of the competent Government Departments in connection with schemes for the employment of labour on land improvement and drainage, forestry, roads, light railways, and also by way of loans to boards of guardians and parish councils in necessitous cases, who are unable to meet claims upon them for relief.

The present proposals will involve the following expenditure, either from savings on existing votes or on future votes:—

Unemployment Grants Committee in 1922-23	£630,000
State contribution to the Unemployed Workers' Dependents' Fund in respect of the period after March 31, 1922	£670,000
State contribution as employer in respect of soldiers or sailors or State employes	£115,000
Acceleration of Government works and contracts	£563,000
Total	£1,978,000

In addition a further sum would be available from the Road Fund for expenditure by the Ministry of Transport on roads to relieve unemployment in necessitous areas if necessary to the extent of £2,000,000. The sum which will be immediately provided by the State for unemployment will thus be £12,000,000.

In addition the State will assume liability for a share of the charges on loans raised by local authorities to meet capital expenditure on approved public works put in hand or accelerated for the purpose of providing employment in the present emergency.

It is proposed, too, that the scope of the exports credits scheme should be extended and modified in some respects:—

1—All countries will now be included.

2—The date of final liquidation of credits will be extended from September 8, 1925, to September 8, 1927.

3—The Department has been authorised to accept applications from British firms asking for credits up to specified amounts in respect of specified countries and for specified amounts.

The Trade Facilities Bill proposes to authorise the Treasury to guarantee the capital or interest or both of loans not exceeding an aggregate of £25,000,000, to be raised with such guarantee by any Government local authority or body of persons for the carrying out of any capital undertakings, or for the purchase of materials manufactured in the United Kingdom required for the purposes of any such undertakings.

COAL EXPORTS.

GREATEST SINCE JANUARY, 1920.

The quantity of coal exported from Great Britain for the month of September, it was stated in Parliament yesterday, was 3,406,579 tons, and compares with a monthly average of 1,799,111 tons exported during the three months preceding the coal stoppage.

The demand for coal abroad fluctuates owing to seasonal and other causes, but the quantity exported during September was greater than in any month since January, 1920, and was equal to more than one-half the quantity exported in September, 1913.

HARDSHIPS OF SERVICE.

WOMEN JURORS COMPLAIN.

Efforts are being made in Belfast to secure the relaxation of the Sex Disqualification (Removal) Act, 1919, with regard to the compulsory service of women on juries. A deputation on the subject from the British Empire Union and Middle Classes Union (Ladies' Committee), introduced by Alderman Mrs. McMordie, C.B.E., M.P., and consisting of Lady McCullagh, C.B.E.; Mrs. Blanche Hume, C.B.E.; Councillor Miss F. F. Clarke, and Mrs. Woodside, a prominent Orangewoman, was received by the Right Hon. Sir Dawson Bates, Home Secretary for Northern Ireland.

The deputation detailed many cases of hardship which compulsory service on juries entailed.

The deputation was sympathetically received.

JUDICIAL CONFERENCE.

CASES FROM NORTHERN IRELAND.

Lord Justice Moore was in Dublin on Saturday, and was for some hours in conference with some of the judges of Southern Ireland at the King's Inns. It is understood that the subject which occupied their attention was the procedure to be followed in dealing with suits from Northern Ireland, which have been originated in Dublin, and which may be transferred for trial at Belfast. Although no official statement was issued, it is believed that an arrangement was come to.

The judges held a meeting yesterday in the Benchers' room at the Four Courts, and it is understood that rules were agreed to which will be a guidance to officers of the Courts, to solicitors and others, in dealing with writs and such matters in their various stages.

COUNTY MAYO'S BURDEN.

IRKSOME JUDICIAL TASKS.

Awards amounting to £30,000 were made at Ballinrobe Quarter Sessions, arising out of ambushes and reprisals.

Judge Doyle, K.C., who heard the claims, said that they had had the remarkable experience of hearing policemen, soldiers, individual members of varied sections of the community, and, lastly, persons obviously in sympathy with the revolutionary movement in Ireland, giving graphic and convincing evidence of deeds of violence and outrage, and claiming, as the law allowed them, in the King's Court the money recompense at the expense of the dwellers in the County Mayo.

Beyond some irrepressible words at the evidence of some exceptional atrocity committed by one side or the other, he had refrained from comment on the deplorable crimes brought under his notice. He repeated what he had said in other towns, that there was no feature of irksomeness in the functions of an Irish judge, save the duty of hearing such tales as these, and of laying an impost for them on the people of the county, at whose hands he had received nothing but kindly welcome.

He sincerely trusted that some way might be found to relieve the ratepayers, and that this Sessions would see the last of those criminal injury applications. He condemned all deeds of violence, and offered his sympathy to the victims and to the relatives of the dead.

COMRADES IN WAR AND PEACE.

KANSAS CITY, Monday.

Lord Beatty, addressing the Convention of the American Legion here, declared that comradeship was the great lesson of the war. He charged ex-soldiers, not only to keep alive that spirit themselves, but to inculcate it in others engaged in the important pursuits of peace.

The spirit of comradeship which animated our fighting men, he said, must animate our nations, so that they may, without let or hindrance, engage in friendly rivalry in commerce, to their mutual advantage and to the betterment of the conditions of life.

FOUR DEAD IN A HOUSE.

RELATIVE WARNED BY LETTER.

A quadruple tragedy was discovered yesterday afternoon at Streatham, a residential suburb in the south-west of London, as the result of a letter received by a relative from Mr. Ernest Coates, 46, a merchant, residing at Leigham Court road.

The victims are:—Mr. Ernest Coates, Mrs. Mary Coates, aged about 60, his wife; Mrs. Daisy Townshend, daughter of Mrs. Coates; and Mr. de Marron, son of Mr. S. Coates.

Mr. Ernest Coates had written the letter to a brother indicating the possibility of a tragedy at the house. This was forwarded to Scotland Yard, whereupon the police immediately proceeded to the house, and, on gaining an entry, found the four persons named dead. Poisoning is suspected.

Leigham Court road is one of the best of Streatham's residential thoroughfares, and consists for the most part of fairly large houses standing in their own grounds.

The Coates family had been in residence there for about two years. Mrs. Coates's son had served in the Army, and had obviously suffered from his experiences. The married daughter had been in hospital for several months suffering from a serious illness, and was discharged only about five weeks ago. She had no children.

Beyond the statement that death in each case was believed to be due to some form of poisoning, the police would give no further information. Mrs. Coates claimed to be a native of Spain, and it is understood that her first husband was a Spaniard. As a nurse she is stated to have once ministered to the King of Spain during a serious illness, and, it is claimed, saved his life.

Mrs. Townsend married about a year ago. She went to Canada, but soon afterwards returned to England.

CONFERENCE HOPES AND FEARS.

VICEROY SEES PREMIER.

Grave fears (says the Press Association) are entertained in some political quarters regarding the possibility of a breakdown between the Government and the representatives of Sinn Fein; but, in spite of this, a considerable degree of optimism still prevails among a certain group.

Lord FitzAlan called at 10 Downing street yesterday morning, and, it is understood, conferred with the Prime Minister.

In Sinn Fein circles yesterday a much more hopeful view was taken of the situation, and, contrary to expectations of a breakdown at the next meeting, they rather anticipated that the Conference may continue for some time.

"I do not think there is any justification for stating that the negotiations have reached a deadlock," said one who is in close touch with the Irish delegates.

There has been no further development in the situation over the week-end.

The Press Association learns on good authority that the difficulty in respect to the question of allegiance has not yet been satisfactorily surmounted, but that there is reason for believing that this problem can be solved once the Irish representatives have been satisfied that there is the possibility of a settlement of the Ulster boundaries. It is understood that the Sinn Fein representatives would offer no objection to meeting Ministers of the Northern Parliament at a later stage of the Conference.

"THE CO-OPTIMISTS."

Members of the Irish Peace Delegation were present yesterday evening at "The Co-Optimists" performance at the Palace Theatre. Among the party were Mr. M. Collins, Mr. A. Griffith, Mr. and Mrs. Desmond Fitzgerald, Mr. E. Duggan, and Mr. McGrath. The party thoroughly enjoyed the evening's entertainment.

NEW CARILLON FOR ARMAGH.

IRELAND'S NOTEWORTHY PEALS.

The new carillon at Armagh Roman Catholic Cathedral will be formally inaugurated next Sunday morning. It consists of 39 bells with clavier—three octaves chromatic E to E, and two extra lower tones diatonic, D to C.

The largest bell weighs 43 hundredweights 14 pounds and the smallest a few pounds. The total weight of the carillon is 11 tons.

The bells are chimed by the carilloneur from a keyboard (the clavier), fixed in the chamber just below the bells, and clavier and connections have been designed to aid the resonance of the bells in every way, and to enable the operator to produce the most artistic effects with the least possible effort.

The position of the bells in the tower has also been carefully considered, so that the "voicing" may be equal throughout, and that the wide range may have the effect of one well-balanced instrument.

In addition to the carillon, a "Cambridge" quarter-chime clock has been erected on a tower of the cathedral. The "Cambridge Quarters" derive their name from the place of [illegible] birth. In the year 1793 the clock of Great St. Mary's, Cambridge, was taken down, and the University agreed to put up another of an improved construction, arranged to strike the quarters on four bells. The celebrated Dr. Crotch was at the time a pupil of Dr. Randall, the Regius Professor of Music, and it is said that young Crotch is to be credited with the idea of taking a phrase in the fifth bar of the opening symphony of Handel's immortal air, "I know that my Redeemer liveth," and expanding it by variation into the musical chime known as the "Cambridge Quarters."

With the inauguration of the carillon, Ireland will possess two of the finest modern carillons in the world. Two years ago a set of 42 bells was placed in Queenstown Cathedral by the famous Taylor Foundry, of Loughborough, which has cast the new bells for Armagh. It consists of 39 bells, with clavier—three octaves chromatic, E to E, with two extra lower tones ditonic, D to C. The total weight of the bells is 11 tons.

BOYCOTT OF BRITISH GOODS.

Replying to Sir John Butcher, Sir Hamar Greenwood said that the Government would be prepared to deal with any breach of the law committed in connection with the attempt to boycott articles of British manufacture imported into Ireland.

Sir J. Butcher—Has the right hon. gentleman taken any steps that would prevent the distribution of this very large number of boycotting circulars—hundreds of thousands in number—throughout Ireland, which has caused the most serious loss to many small traders in the South of Ireland?

Sir H. Greenwood—These circulars, if found, are commandeered. The people distributing them would certainly be arrested. If posted they would be torn down. I do not think there is any information on which the statement can be based that hundreds of thousands of these have been issued.

Sir John Butcher—Has he read the report to the meeting of Sinn Fein delegates a few days ago, stating that 225,000 notices boycotting British goods had been distributed, and has he taken any steps?

Lieutenant-Colonel Archer-Shee—Is he aware that Woolworth's Stores in Dublin were closed by so-called Irish Republican Army police while eight Dublin Metropolitan Police were looking on, and that no steps were taken to prevent these stores from being closed because they were selling British goods?

No answer was returned.

DECREE FOR WIFE.

In the Divorce Court, London, yesterday, the President concluded the hearing of the petition of Madame Justin Jeanne Froissard for the dissolution of her marriage because of the cruelty and misconduct of her husband, Marc Georges Froissard, who denied the allegations.

The husband cross-petitioned for a divorce, alleging the wife's misconduct with Etienne Chavanne, which was denied.

The President said he was satisfied that the husband had been guilty of misconduct and cruelty. There was no truth in the charges against the wife and Chavanne. A decree was granted to the wife, with the custody of the children.

MINERS' WAGE CUT.

Following a meeting of the National Union of Scottish Mine Workers at Glasgow yesterday, it was stated that the accountants' report for September showed that there would be a reduction of 4s. 2d. per day, and surface workers in proportion. This means that the miners' wages, which were 25s. 6d. per day in February last, will be reduced to 9s. 8d., while surface workers' wages, which were between 15s. and 16s., came down to less than 6s.

FROM TO-DAY'S LONDON PAPERS.

PREMIER'S ANSWER.

JUSTIFICATION OF POLICY.

"THE TIMES" OF TO-DAY SAYS:—

The Prime Minister's answer to the actual terms of the indictment was complete. He had been guilty of no omissions which were not justified in the interests of the Conference itself. The Government case, as Mr. Lloyd George stated it, was perfectly clear. If they were justified in acting upon the King's message to his Irish people, if it was right to invite to a Conference the only party in Ireland with whom negotiations could conceivably have served a useful purpose, then the Government are entitled to demand that the House of Commons and the country should trust them until they have proved, beyond yea or nay, whether the object of that Conference can be attained.

The true interest of yesterday's debate did not, however, lie in the answer which the Prime Minister would give to the "die-hards," but in what he might say of the progress of the negotiations. Since the publication of Mr. de Valera's unhappy telegram to the Pope rumour had been busy and despondency had been growing apace. Only in Ireland did men seem confident that there could be no return to the conditions that had preceded the Truce.

Unfortunately, Mr. Lloyd George had no good tidings to tell. We do not question the wisdom of his reticence in regard to what is happening. He has said enough to warn the country that the fate of the negotiations is in the balance. No settlement has yet been reached, and there is apparently serious danger that no settlement will be reached.

Mr. Lloyd George knows the cost of failure. He knows the weakness of an unsettled Ireland to the British Commonwealth. If we are to judge by his speech yesterday, he knows also where in this matter the honour of our country lies.

A GRAVE ASPECT.

The Parliamentary Correspondent of The Times writes:—The Prime Minister's speech last night was felt to be momentous. It was fully recognised that he was meeting more formidable menaces to the Conference and its success than were contained in the vote of censure and the arguments by which it had been supported.

The alternative to negotiations and the consequences of the failure of the Conference were depicted in language and tones of the gravest import, and in the midst of the computation of the military strength that would be required to overcome guerilla forces in Southern Ireland was this sentence—"I am not asking the House of Commons to face anything which someone at this box might not ask it to face, perhaps, in a few days."

The phrase, "someone at this box," replacing a pronoun of the first person, cannot be passed over. What does it signify? The Prime Minister faced with solemn earnestness and without reserve the eventuality of the re-employment of force in Ireland becoming necessary.

There is information from trustworthy sources that Ulster will in all forseeable circumstances take its stand on the Government of Ireland Act, and refuse to consider any modification of its provisions. If, then, Ulster continues to hold aloof, and this aloofness should be the last obstacle to a settlement, it is suggested that Mr. Lloyd George had such a situation in his mind when, not once, but twice, he used the phrase "someone at this box."

The conclusion which is drawn is that, bound by his obligations, and those of his Government, to Ulster, he would refuse to contemplate an enforced modification of Ulster's political position, but that he would also decline to undertake the long and costly military measures necessary to overwhelm Sinn Fein, and would resign.

WORLD'S PEACE.

"BLAZING THE TRAIL."

The Times, in a leading article, says:—In the fine peroration to his weighty speech last night, the American Ambassador expressed the hope that the Washington Conference would but "blaze the trail" for yet greater things to come, for fresh steps on the upward path towards the consummation of aspirations that are common to mankind.

That ideal is shared, not only by his fellow-Pilgrims, but by all who speak our tongue, and by millions more over the broad earth who are sensible of the beneficent influence of American intervention in the war for right and for liberty.

Last night Mr. Harvey was "blazing the trail" for the Conference, and the path which he marked out is clear. There is not a statesman in the Allied countries, nor, we believe, a statesman in the United States, who has not shown eager and earnest desire to see the goal triumphantly attained.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

There was only a small attendance of members in the House yesterday, in view of to-day's holiday (says The Times), and, with the Paris market closed, business was on a limited scale, but the general tone was by no means unsatisfactory. A feature was a rise of about 50 per cent. in the value of Russian Bonds on the publication of the text of the Note addressed by the Soviet Government to the British Government, and it was possible to sell stock. Oil and Mining Shares were a better market, and some of the leading Industrial issues were wanted.

MR. G. DUGGAN'S RETIREMENT.

Mr. George Duggan, Manager, Provincial Bank of Ireland, Dublin, having on Monday completed 50 years' service in the bank, retired from office. The occasion was marked by a handsome presentation of plate, suitably inscribed, from past and present members of the College street staff, as a testimony of regard for Mr. Duggan, and of appreciation of his many qualities.

Mr. S. D. Budd, Chief Officer of the Bank in Ireland, expressed the regret felt by his colleagues at the severance of the official relations which Mr. Duggan's retirement involved. Mr. W. J. L. Clarendon, cashier, on behalf of the College street staff, also emphasised the regret with which Mr. Duggan's departure was viewed, and joined in the hope that he might long enjoy the rest which the relinquishment of his position would bring.

Mr. Duggan, in accepting the presentation, said that he would always have happy memories of the years he had spent in College street, and of the friendly feeling that had existed between himself and the rest of the staff; but now, when the hour to bid them an official good-bye had, indeed, come, he felt doing so more than he could well express. He thanked them all for their gift, which he would prize as an evidence of their goodwill.

The staff was subsequently hospitably entertained by Mr. Duggan.

IRISH PHILATELIC CLUB.

At the annual meeting of the Irish Philatelic Club and Exchange, held in the Insurance Institute, the following officers were elected for the coming season:—Messrs. G. Jameson Johnston, M.D., F.R.C.S.I., president; C. H. Hone, W. E. Stears, T. A. Stodart, Major Wildman, O.B.E., J. P. O'Connor, M.B., and R. Dobbyn, committee; Dr. J. Stafford Johnson, hon. sec. and treasurer.

The Hon. Sec.'s report for the past year showed a balance of £26 in hand. Stamps to the value of £700 had changed hands in the Exchange. Many instructive displays had been made, and interesting lectures given.

The meetings will be held on the first and third Thursdays of the month till June next. There is a good philatelic library connected with the club, which is an excellent medium for gaining knowledge of stamps and disposing of duplicates.

At the meeting sympathetic references were made to the great loss that Irish philately had suffered by the death of the former president, Mr. W. Lane-Joynt, who also acted as Curator of the Leinster Collection in the National Museum.

SLOW FALL IN FOOD PRICES.

HOW BREAD HAS CHEAPENED.

TWOPENCE OFF IN TEN MONTHS.

LONDON CHEAPER THAN DUBLIN.

Householders in Dublin were yesterday favoured with another decrease in the price of bread. The ruling prices now are:—1lb. loaf, 3½d.; 2lb., 6½d.; 4lb. loaf, 1s. 1d. Since January 3 last there have been nine decreases in bread prices. These were as follows:—

	2lb. Loaf.	1lb. Loaf.
January 3	8½d.	—
January 24	8¼d.	—
February 14	8d.	4¼d.
February 28	7¾d.	—
June 6	7½d.	4d.
August 29	7¼d.	3¾d.
September 19	7d.	3½d.
October 10	6¾d.	3½d.
October 31	6½d.	3½d.

It will be seen that the reduction in no case went beyond a farthing on the 2lb. loaf.

Inquiries yesterday showed that the public may look forward to a further reduction in the near future. Heavy stocks of wheat that were held up during the year were now being released, and the public, it was stated, was getting every advantage in the fall of prices.

While the price for the 4lb. loaf is now 1s. 1d. in Dublin, the charge in London is 10d. In Limerick the 4lb. loaf is sold at 11d., and freight charges to that city are as heavy as those to Dublin. In Donaghmore and Rathdowney the 4lb. loaf costs 1s. 2d.

DAIRY PRODUCE INCREASES.

Although bread is showing a downward tendency, other articles of food are increasing in price. Butter and eggs are getting dearer, and yesterday 2d. a lb. extra was being charged for the former. Eggs are becoming scarce, and as much as 5s. per dozen is now being charged.

The price lists in the various shops in the city do not show many variations as compared with those displayed on October 8. There may be a drop of a penny or twopence in one article, but against that there is an increase of a similar amount for other commodities.

There were rumours in Dublin yesterday that meat prices had increased. These, no doubt, arose in consequence of the advance in cattle prices at the Dublin market last Thursday. This advance was between 3s. and 4s. per cwt. The Dublin Victuallers' Association has not considered the matter of increasing prices up to the present, and householders may, therefore, rest content for the time being, at any rate, that their butcher's bill will not be any higher. The prices published in Friday's papers still obtain.

Fish has not varied much in price since October 8. All the prices are virtually the same, except that plaice is now 1s. 4d. a lb., instead of 1s. 6d.; soles (black) and turbot, 2s. 2d., instead of 2s. 4d.

Turkeys show a reduction of 3d. a lb., the price on October 8 being 2s. 6d. Other prices remain as before:—Chickens, 1s. 10d. a lb.; fowls (for boiling), 1s. 6d.; rabbits, 1s. 8d. each; ducklings, 1s. 10d.; Michaelmas geese, 1s. 9d.; plover (golden), 1s. 6d., do. (green), 1s. 3d.

BACON CHEAPER.

The reduction in the price of finest Irish bacon has been more marked than in other classes. Here is a comparison of prices:—

	Oct. 8.	Oct. 31.
Whole gammon	2s. 0d.	1s. 9d.
Half gammon	2s. 4d.	2s. 1d.
Half shank	1s. 10d.	1s. 6d.
Whole fore-end	1s. 6d.	1s. 1d.
Half fore-end	1s. 2d.	1s. 4d.
Flanks	1s. 6d.	1s. 3d.

The fruit market shows a slight change in some prices, but, taken all round, there is no big advance. Yesterday being All Hallows' Eve, the fruit shops contained a plentiful supply of good eating apples at reasonable prices. Dessert apples were being sold at 2s. a dozen, or 10d. a lb.; cooking, 2½d. a lb.; large, 5½d. Bananas remain at 3s. a dozen, as also the following:—Black grapes, 2s. 6d. a lb.; pears (home), 6d. to 1s. each. Tomatoes have increased from 11d. to 1s. 3d. a lb. The prices for vegetables rule about the same as a month ago.

Other attractions for All Hallows' Eve included:—Barm bracks, at 2s. to 2s. 6d. each; almonds, 1s. 6d. a lb.; Brazil nuts, 1s. 6d.; walnuts, 2s.; cobs, 1s. 3d.; filberts, 2s.

The prices for groceries do not vary to any extent.

LARGE PROFIT-TAKING.

Conversing with many consumers yesterday, an Irish Times representative found that general dissatisfaction exists at what is described as the almost infinitesimal reductions made by retailers.

"We blame the retailers," it was said, "more than the wholesalers. We see the latter disposing of their goods at a certain figure, and yet the retailer marks them at a price which gives him an exceedingly fine profit—more, indeed, than he is entitled to."

Farmers are not now getting the remunerative prices that prevailed during the war, and yet their produce is being sold in the shops at the same figure as before peace was declared. This is not fair to the public.

"Anti-Profiteering" Committees are now being formed all over the country, and in one part of Dublin a system of collective bargaining is in operation, and is working with success.

Something is certainly wanted to bring about a larger reduction in the prices of foodstuffs generally.

PRICES IN THE WEST.

Our Galway Correspondent says that the price of the 4lb. loaf there has been reduced to 1s. A fortnight ago the price was 1s. 2d. It was reduced by 1d. when it was learned that a local baker had contracted to supply the guardians at 9½d.

Gas and laundry prices in Galway are considered to be unduly high, and commercial travellers complain of the high charges at Western hotels.

OBITUARY.

MR. ROBERT ARDILL.

Mr. Robert Ardill, a director of Messrs. Fairbairn, Lawson, Combe, Barbour, Ltd., Falls Foundry, Belfast, died suddenly yesterday. Mr. Ardill, who resided in Belfast, was in the habit of spending each week-end on Mahie Island, Strangford Lough, where he had a residence. The motor boat was moored near Mahie Island, and, when stepping from the craft into a small punt, Mr. Ardill and the boatman slipped and fell into the water. Mr. Ardill was lifted into the boat almost immediately, but expired in a few minutes. It is believed that the shock of the sudden immersion caused heart failure. The boatman was nothing the worse of his experience.

Mr. Ardill, who was unmarried, was born in 1859. He was a cousin of Mr. J. Milne Barbour, D.L., Mr. Frank Barbour, and Mr. Harold Barbour, of the Hilden Thread Works, Lisburn, and also of Mr. Thomas Barbour and of Mr. Walter Barbour, of Messrs. Combe, Barbour, Ltd. The deceased was a member of the Ulster Reform Club, Belfast, the flag of which was flying this afternoon at half-mast.

MONSIGNOR O'LEARY.

The Rev. Monsignor O'Leary, P.P., Clonakilty, Co. Cork, died rather suddenly at his residence yesterday.

MR. JOHN MACPHERSON.

Mr. John Macpherson, Mulben, Banffshire, a noted judge and owner of Aberdeen-Angus cattle, died yesterday. He was over seventy years of age, and founded his herd nearly thirty-five years ago. He judged Aberdeen-Angus cattle at the national shows of England, Ireland and Scotland.

MR. HENRY WOODS, R.A.

The Secretary of the Royal Academy states that news has been received in London of the death in Venice last Thursday of Mr. Henry Woods, R.A. Born at Warrington in 1846, Mr. Woods began his art education in the School of Art there. Originally he worked for periodicals, and was one of the original members of The Graphic staff. He exhibited at the Royal Academy from the first exhibition at Burlington House.

AN OPEN DOOR AT MIDNIGHT.

At midnight last night members of the Dublin Metropolitan Police on duty in Sackville street found the entrance door of the Hibernian Bank open, and as a precaution took possession of the building. The outer gate was locked, and there did not appear to be any disturbance of bank property inside.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE'S SPEECH.

"The debate is not over," read the following extract from one of the Premier's speeches:—

"There are certain individuals who are implicated in commission of crime so serious that the Government cannot consent to abandon their intention to bring them to trial."

Mr. Lloyd George—I had that fully in my mind. Those were men that had been convicted of murder.

A Voice—"Michael Collins."

Mr. Lloyd George—He has not been convicted, and, under British law, every man who has not been convicted of a crime is innocent. I did not interrupt my right hon. friend, and, after all, it is one of the elementary principles of English law.

JULY LETTER.

I now come to the letter of July, which was written to carry out the spirit of His Majesty's appeal in his gracious Speech from the Throne at Belfast. Why was there no challenge then? This is no time for a challenge. The time to make the challenge was when that letter was published, and when the House was informed.

A Member—We did.

Mr. Lloyd George—I beg by right hon. friend's pardon. Had there been a demand of 40 or 50 members, I am sure my right hon. friend, the Leader of the House, would have been prepared to have had the question discussed.

Every step was taken, after full notification to the House. There has been no challenge until after the Conference began. Now I am invited to state what the opinion of the Government is in the middle of a Conference on the subjects which are now under discussion at the Conference. There are two kinds of conference which you can hold. You can hold a perfectly open conference, where reporters are admitted, where everything is fairly presented to the public the following morning. That is one kind of conference. There are well-known conferences—party conferences, ecclesiastical conferences—and they have their uses. But no business is ever transacted in them—none. (Laughter, and ironical cheers.) They encourage the faithful—(laughter)—they hearten the faithful; and everybody goes home feeling that he has taken part in the only show on earth. (Laughter.) These conferences are essential to the life of any organisation. But those are not the conferences where business is transacted.

BUSINESS CONFERENCE.

There is the second kind of conference—the conference with closed doors, where men can state their case, make tentative proposals, make suggestions, without always fearing that the following morning every word would be scrutinised. You are taking a certain line with a view to a line which you will take further on, which you cannot explain at the moment. Those are the conferences business men always hold. If business men want to put through a great transaction, whether it is a great conference, a great amalgamation, or what not, they do not have reports the following morning to their shareholders of everything that passed between them. The matter is afterwards submitted to their judgment. Those are the only conferences in which you can do business.

There is a third kind of conference which has the vices of both, and the advantages of neither—that is a conference of partial disclosure. One side goes to its own friends and says:—"Here, we are not going to give way on this, and we are going to stick out for that." The other party goes to its friends and says:—"We are going to stand by this; we won't in the least give way on that." That is the way to bring every conference to complete disaster. (Hear, hear.)

You cannot have it on one side without having it on the other. You cannot have a discussion here on every one of these items which have been discussed here without having a discussion next week on some items in the Assembly in Ireland. That is the way to defeat a conference. The House of Commons—I say it without caring, personally, one iota—must either trust its negotiators or replace them. (Cheers.)

BUSINESS OR NOT?

THE ALTERNATIVE.

The whole business of government is such that no man would care to stick to it without the confidence of the people and the country.

What I want to know is whether the House of Commons wish us to try to make peace. If it does not, there will, at any rate, be one person to go to his Sovereign and hand back his seals. (Cheers.)

Let the House of Commons realise that nothing can be done until whatever is accomplished behind closed doors comes to the House of Commons. If they do not like any of the terms, they are not committed—not the least.

It is the business of the House of Commons to reject them if they do not like them, and they have full power to do so.

My hon. friends say—"We are all for Conference." Do they really imagine they can have a Conference if there is to be a discussion in the House of Commons over the proposals while the Conference is going on? That Conference would be perfectly worthless.

GRAVAMEN OF THE CASE.

Then I come to the point which my hon. friends have raised, and which I take to be the gravamen of their charge against the Government. They say—"We are all for Conference. We think that a Conference is desirable, but we do not think the Conference should be with men who are engaged in repudiating the authority of the Crown, and who have been associated with deeds which we abhor." Whom would they confer with? (Cheers.) Colonel Gretton's speech was one series of interrogatories, and, if I had answered them at the time, I might have disturbed his speech. Those who think you ought not to confer with Sinn Fein representatives, but who believe that there should be a Conference—whom would they confer with?

SOUTHERN UNIONISTS.

Would you confer with the Southern Unionists? We have done so. Southern Unionists were the first to press me to go into conference—men as loyal to the Crown as any men in this House. They stood by the Crown through dark and difficult days in Ireland all through their lives, and some of them actually entered into conference with these very men whom we are told we ought never to talk to. They are very well known. They are distinguished Unionists. Some of them have held high office under the Crown, but they would be the last men to tell the House of Commons, or to tell the country, that it would be the slightest use coming to terms with them. They could not put through an arrangement for Ireland. They said so. They said—"You must make your arrangement with Mr. de Valera and his associates."

Well, now, who else? He might have met my hon. friends (the Nationalists), but they would be the very first to admit that they are not in a position at the present moment to speak on behalf of the majority of Southern Ireland. Who else might we have met? We could have picked men from Ireland, and said "Will you come and confer with us?" and "Will you?" and then there is a third man who comes and confers with us—highly respected, loyal, patriotic, who have never taken up arms against the Crown. What would be the good? You might have discussion with them, and agree with them. You might meet Sir Horace Plunkett, a distinguished Irishman, but could he carry anybody in Ireland with him—(cries of "No.")—on either side. (Renewed Ulster Unionist cries of "No.") He attempted it in the Convention, and the only party that had the majority in Ireland never went near the place.

CHOICE LIMITED.

Therefore, if there is to be a Conference at all, it must be a Conference with people who, for the time being, speak in the name of the majority of the Irish people. I am told they only speak for the Irish people, because they have secured representation by intimidation and by threats. If you are to say that, you will not treat men as members as elected representatives because of the methods by which they have been elected. (Loud laughter and cheers.) Then there is an end to the British Constitution. (Renewed laughter.) Because I have never seen a party obtain a majority in this House but that the other party said that they had been elected by methods which were a discredit to the very last degree. (Laughter.) You always get that charge whoever obtains the majority.

Let us face the real facts for the moment—we know it from reports we have received—For the moment the sympathies of Ireland are behind these people. The only thing we can do, when men have been elected under an Act of Parliament passed by this House, is to treat them as representatives of that people.

If you, therefore, say that all Sinn Fein has declared for a Republic—I make this admission—and that all Sinn Fein has repudiated the authority of the Crown—I make that admission—and that you are not going to deal with them for that reason, there is no one in Ireland to deal with. (Hear, hear.) It is not the first time Britain has treated with rebels with good effects for the Empire.

As a matter of fact, after the annexation to the Crown of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State, every man who fought was a rebel against the authority of the Crown. Let the House of Commons realise that the only point for us to decide is this—not whether you are going to treat with rebels, and not whether you are going to treat with men organised in a conspiracy against the Crown, but whether you are going to enter into a conference at all, or whether—and here I face the issue which my hon. friend did not face—whether you are going to enter into negotiation with these men who repudiated the authority of the Crown, or whether you are going to say that you must, first of all—whatever it costs—crush the rebellion, and then deal with Ireland. That is the only issue. (Cheers.)

COUNTING THE COST.

I will proceed to examine that. That is a very important decision for the House of Commons to take. The decision it takes tonight will indicate what its view is upon that question—whether it is to say to the Government—Drop these negotiations, crush rebellion first, and then impose upon Ireland such terms as seem just in the sight of the Imperial Parliament. It is a question of the cost. (Cries of "More than that.") Let us count the cost. I agree it is a fair issue to present to the House of Commons. It is a fair issue to present to a Government. It is an issue we considered, and, therefore, I am not in the least criticising my hon. friends. They are putting to themselves questions I put to myself. Now, I am going to deal quite frankly with the House of Commons. It is no use unless you do. If this Conference is broken off—and it might be—I am not asking the House of Commons to face anything which I at this box may not be inviting you to face in a few days. But I want the House to face it squarely.

WHAT IS THE TASK?

What is the task before it, and what is expected of it to satisfy the conscience of the civilised world? My hon. friend, in a speech at Burton, said that we came just up to the point when the gunmen were about to be broken, and added that the Government were going from bad to worse.

But what is the task in front of us? It is not the task of placing armies in the field to enable you to accomplish your desire. Our experience is the experience of every country—of having to deal with guerilla warfare, where numbers, in order to achieve success, have to be entirely out of proportion to the number of your opponents. You have to surround them—hunt down small, elusive bands over very considerable tracts of territory—a good deal of it over highly difficult mountainous country, where the population is entirely in sympathy with your guerillas. Those who have had experience of the South African war knows what that means—every farm a depot and an observation post, every resident supplying information and giving warning to those attacking the forces of the Crown. We all know how gigantic were the forces that had to be put into South Africa in order to accomplish our task.

If it has to be done, and if the people of this country are convinced it must be done, it can be done and will be done. (Cheers.) There will be unpleasant incidents. One of the evils of guerilla warfare is that your forces are dispersed, and are not under the same control and discipline as when employed in masses. I put it to the House of Commons solemnly that, unless it is absolutely necessary for the honour and security of this country, this is not the time to come down to this House and ask it to impose great additional burdens on the taxation of the country and invite young men to risk their lives.

I feel that before you do that you must first convince the people of this country that there is no other course. You must convince the Empire. We must convince ourselves that there is no alternative. Negotiations are proceeding, and I shall be happy to be in a position to stand at this table and to announce that the people of this country—this great Empire—had decided to put an end to this feud of centuries.

GRAVE POSSIBILITY.

I cannot conceal from the House the possibility that I may have to make this grave announcement—that it is impossible to settle without danger of dishonour. But if that terrible hour comes, and, standing at this box, I ask the House of Commons to ask the country to make greater sacrifices, we must feel that everything has been done—(cheers)—and that every member of this House will be able to go to his constituency and say—"We are fighting for the security of the Empire, for the honour of Britain, for freedom and right, and we have done everything in our power to make peace, and it is no fault of ours that that has not been done."

We are trying to put every member of the House in that position, and we are doing our best to try to secure peace. (Cheers.)

For plain issues of principle this country is prepared to take great risks, but it must be convinced that the challenge is adequate, and that there are no other means of adjusting it. If the security of the country is menaced, if the Throne is repudiated, if this Empire is to be mutilated, and Ireland established as an alien country, so that she is free to make war on our commerce, and British commerce be liable to attack on the Irish coast, without any right for Britain to use the shores of Ireland for its defence—if Ireland, fighting for her freedom, leaving Britain staggering along under her burden, which Ireland joined in incurring, and which every Irishman throughout the world is sharing to-day; if an arrangement is insisted upon which means that the fires of civil war are to rage at our doors between Catholics and Protestants, while we look on, then Great Britain, I feel confident, will take the necessary risks. (Cheers.)

EQUAL TO THE TASK.

An island which raised six or seven million men to fight for the liberty of Europe is still quite equal to defending its own honour and maintaining its own safety. But we must be convinced on all points, and we should examine every proposition and every path that leads to an honourable peace. We want to be able honestly and sincerely to tell our countrymen that if we fail our responsibilities as negotiators and a Government are enormous. We have offered the best advice to the Sovereign and to Parliament, and grave issues are dependent upon this Conference.

The fate of the Empire, or, rather, the strength of the Empire, is involved. I do not mind admitting that the war was to me a revelation of the immense hidden strength of this Empire and of its importance to the cause of humanity. The Government will never overlook this fact in their negotiations. If concessions are pressed of a character which would weaken the Empire, then the Government will resist them, but if concessions can be made which will bring an honourable peace and will strengthen the Empire, it will do all that is possible to define them.

I have talked about the responsibility of the Government. The responsibility of Parliament is greater. (Cheers.) We can negotiate, we can advise, we can recommend, but Parliament can decide. Therefore, their responsibility is greater. Parliament, if it so wills, can protract this dangerous and definite feud into an uncertain future. If this is so the responsibility will rest on Parliament.

Neither Parliament nor the Government can ensure a settlement. That depends not merely on us, but on representatives of Ireland. But Parliament can do its share, and the decision of this House now may be to fight.

This decision to-night may be a fateful one in the history of the Empire. It may be—who knows—written in the annals of this Parliament that this House of Commons equipped the Government, whose life depends upon its will, with new authority to enter upon a peace which brought an accession of strength to this great Empire by bringing to its side a gifted and a gallant people—(hear, hear)—who for centuries have been at feud, by removing from the path of Empire the peril that has always beset it in the hour of its deepest perplexity, and by adding a brilliant chapter to the renown which this Empire has won throughout the world as the one Empire that found a way to transfuse freedom into power. (Loud cheers.)

PARADOXICAL SITUATION.

Mr. Asquith said that the House had been placed in as paradoxical a situation as he had ever known. The result was avowedly intended as a vote of censure, yet it singled out for censure the one and only point in the policy of the Government in regard to Ireland which met with the heartfelt support of the Opposition. At the same time it was a motion which in spirit and essence would have been carried with enthusiastic approval twelve months ago.

Since then Ireland had passed through, perhaps, the most tragic year in its history. The Government assured Parliament over and over again that they were making headway with their policy of retaliation and exasperation, that they were driving Sinn Fein into the hills and traps, and were always on the eve of complete and shining success. They had heard a very different story from the Prime Minister that evening. (Cheers.) It was the complete failure of the policy of guerrilla warfare that had been carried on in Ireland during the last nine months that had at last tardily, but happily, opened the eyes of the Government to the realities of the situation. (Opposition cheers.)

LAST YEAR'S EXPERIENCE.

But those who put forward this resolution had learned nothing from the experience of the past year. They had not learned that the gods they worshipped had been dethroned. The policy which the Opposition had advocated was now the policy of the Government. (Opposition cheers.) The motion was unsound in substance and impolitic in tone, but, though he and his friends could not countenance the motion in any way, it must not be inferred that they were giving a blank cheque, or a general note of confidence to the Government. They believed that the Government were pursuing a wise and statesmanlike course, and only wished they had adopted that course earlier. Nothing could be more ridiculous than to suggest that in a Conference of this kind the proposals to be made by the Government should be published in advance to the world. While the Conference lasted, it should be strictly private and confidential. At the same time, Parliament and the country should not be committed to a settlement without their consent. (Hear, hear.)

Colonel Page Croft asked what were the further concessions that the Prime Minister considered would have to be made to Sinn Fein. He had information that the fatuous truce was being broken in Ireland a hundred times daily. He supported the motion because he was unable to turn political somersaults with the amazing agility of the Prime Minister.

Mr. Jellett said that he was convinced that the principle underlying the words of the motion was sound, and embodied the convictions of by far the larger section of the House. If what the Prime Minister said represented the real state of affairs in Ireland, it filled him with shame. What did it mean? It meant that, so far as Southern Ireland was concerned, the only people who could be got to represent the interests of the country were a gang of assassins, and if they wanted the views of Southern Ireland they were driven to people who had acquired their power, not by the free-will of those they were supposed to represent, but by election at the point of the revolver.

Could it be said that these negotiations were initiated in the speech delivered in Ireland by the King? Did His Majesty mean that peace was to be arrived at by a Conference between His Majesty's Government and people holding these views? There was no doubt of what the King meant. He meant a peace that would be permanent and lasting, made with men who had sworn allegiance to the Crown—not sworn allegiance to an Irish Republic.

The Prime Minster stated that he had conferred with certain Southern Unionists. He (Mr. Jellett) did not wish the House to be under any misapprehension in the matter. He knew perfectly well the people to whom the Prime Minister referred, and he wanted the House to know that they did not represent Southern Unionists, and that the Irish Unionist Alliance had repudiated the action of these gentlemen.

A BOLSHEVIST MENACE.

The Prime Minister drew a picture of the terrible consequences that might ensue if the Conference came to nothing, but what was going to happen in Ireland if the Conference did not come to terms? Did the House and the right hon. gentlemen know that there was a large party in Ireland known as the Irish Labour Party, which was out for a Bolshevik Republic, that these very men were at daggers drawn with Sinn Fein, and that the latter would have nothing to do with them? The issues which would arise if there was a Republic in Ireland would be between those two factions.

The Republic was there already—that was the trouble. The law in Ireland was the law of the Irish Republic. Only last week a man of the farming class was walking along outside the Four Courts in Dublin, when he was suddenly stopped by six or eight Sinn Feiners. He knocked one or two of them down, but he was overpowered by the others, and was placed in a passing cart and carried off. During the whole of these operations four Metropolitan policemen were looking on. (An Hon. Member—Brave fellows.) We are looking to the great public of this country. We believe that they are slowly awakening to the real truth. The time is not far distant when they will take no uncertain stand for King, Constitution, and Empire.

MR. J. JONES WITHDRAWS.

Lord Winterton maintained that the Unionist Party was committed to Home Rule at the last election.

This aroused expressions of dissent from various members, Mr. J. Jones being among those who interrupted.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. J. F. Hope), addressing Mr. Jones, said that he must ask him to cease interrupting the proceedings.

Mr. Jones—Other people can interrupt, but I must not.

Following further Unionist interruptions of Earl Winterton,

Mr. Jones called out to the Deputy-Speaker—"What about the interruptions now? Why don't you pull up some of these bounders?"

The Deputy-Speaker—If the hon. member interrupts again, I shall ask him to withdraw.

Mr. J. Jones—I am being singled out. I am quite prepared to leave.

The Deputy-Speaker—I call upon the hon. member to withdraw.

Mr. J. Jones—I shall leave when I like.

The Deputy-Speaker—Does the hon. member refuse to leave?

Mr. Jones—I am willing to leave the House. I am sorry I ever came into it.

Mr. Jones then withdrew from the House.

Mr. Clynes thought the debate had completely demolished any case which could be addressed in censure of the Government for entering upon the conference. The Prime Minister, in his powerful speech, admitted that the Government had failed when they adopted the wrong policy of force. The present poicy must be continued unti there was a settement by agreement.

ARMS IMPORTATION PLOT.

Sir F. Banbury, speaking as a supporter of the motion, said that it could not be brought forward before now, because they did not know that the Government were going to eat their words, and surrender to Sinn Fein. They wrote to the Prime Minister on August 19, the day the House adjourned, protesting against the reversal of Government policy announced on the 15th. They had thought that in the Chief Secretary they had a man of iron. He had turned out to be a man of straw. (Cheers.) He referred to an attempt to import arms from Germany into Ireland.

Mr. Chamberlain said the position with regard to Germany was that the German Government gave us information of an attempt to send arms from Germany which the German Government had prevented.

Proceeding, he said that the debate was fraught with grave consequences to the future of those islands and the Empire. At the last election Unionists went to the country on the manifesto issued jointly by Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Bonar Law. was not the time then to enter upon measures for an Irish settlement. The Government thought that it was time to do so now. (Cheers, and cries of "Oh.") The resolution did not challenge the conditions laid down by the Government. It challenged the propriety of negotiating at all with the people invited by the Government to the Conference.

Following the visit of the King to Belfast, there was a great desire throughout the English-speaking world that the Government should act in the spirit of the words uttered by His Majesty on that occasion. (Hear, hear.) The reason why the motion was put down now was because the intervention of irritating circumstances had prejudiced the atmosphere of reconciliation. It was incidents which had occurred since the King's visit that had changed the atmosphere.

No one on either side had ever questioned the binding character of the truce. The Irish delegates had acted in this matter as men of honour. (Hear, hear, and cries of "Oh.") They were doing their best to carry out the terms of the truce. He begged the House not lightly to ruin the whole chance of peace. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. T. P. O'Connor said that the Nationalist members would vote against the resolution.

At 11 o'clock Sir W. Davison rose to continue the discussion, but Mr. Chamberlain moved the closure, and this was agreed to.

THE DIVISION.

IRISH NATIONALISTS VOTE FOR GOVERNMENT.

The House then divided, when there voted:—

For the resolution	43
Against	439
Majority against	396

The result was received with loud cheers.

In the division all the Independent Liberals, Labour members, and the Irish Nationalists present voted for the Government against the motion. The Ulster Unionist M.P.'s abstained.

The minority of 43 for the motion (or 45, including the two tellers, Colonel Gretton and Mr. Rupert Gwynne) included:—Colonel Archer Shee, Sir Frederick Banbury, Captain Foxcroft, Mr. Marriott, Professor Oman, Mr. Pennefather, Mr. Gershom Stewart, General Townshend, General Page Croft, Colonel James, Colonel Burn, Colonel Ashley, Mr. Rawlinson, Viscount Wolmer, Captain Pretyman Newman, Mr. Wilson Fox, Admiral Adair, Sir James Remnant, Mr. George Balfour, and Mr. W. Jellett.

Of the members who signed the motion on the Order paper all either voted for, or were paired for, the motion except Sir Keith Fraser, who voted with the Government, and General Surtees, who abstained. The following is the list of pairs:—

For—Lord Hugh Cecil, Sir W. Joynson Hicks, Sir A. Holbrook, Commander Dewhurst, Mr. J. Erskine.

Against—Lord Henry Cavendish Bentinck, Sir Montagu Barlow, Sir Edward Nicholl, Colonel Mildmay, Sir W. Preston.

PEACE IN BELFAST.

HOPEFUL OUTLOOK.

The Lord Mayor (Sir W. F. Coates, D.L.) made a most satisfactory report on the peaceable state of Belfast at the resumed meeting of the Peace Conference in that city yesterday.

There was a full attendance of representatives of the various interests concerned.

The Lord Mayor, as arranged at the last meeting, consulted Major-General Cameron, C.B., C.M.G., and the Commissioner of Police.

A further interchange of the views of the members of the Conference took place, after which it was agreed to adjourn sine die, leaving it to the Lord Mayor to again convene the Conference if any necessity arose.

GALLANTRY AT SEA.

The story of how the installation of the Marconi direction finder was instrumental in saving the crew of a disabled steamer in the North Sea in January last was told at a meeting of the Local Marine Board in Dublin yesterday, when silver medals and diplomas were presented on behalf of the Norwegian Government to two then members of the crew of the Head liner, Fanad Head, in connection with the rescue of the crew of the ss. Ontaneda.

The recipients were Mr. William G. Gibbons, fourth officer, of Dungarvan, and Mr. Michael Massey, A.B., of Lower Mountpleasant avenue, Ranelagh.

The Outaneda was drifting in the Atlantic with broken-down engines and a list of 50 degrees in a heavy sea early in the morning of January 11. Several ships steamed to her assistance, but could find no trace of her near the spot where she was supposed to be. The Fanad Head was equipped with the latest type Marconi direction-finding apparatus, and Captain Finlay took wireless bearings. To his astonishment the finder indicated that the distressed vessel was straight ahead of the Fanad Head, whereas the position calculated by the Ontaneda herself was 90 miles to the south.

The Outaneda signalled that she was in danger of capsizing, and requested that the crew should be taken off as quickly as possible. A line was passed over the stern of the Ontaneda, and by this means the men lowered themselves into the sea and were pulled through the water to the boats.

Shortly afterwards the disabled vessel turned over and sank.

WOMEN PATROLS.—The report of the activities of the Irish Women Patrols in Dublin, which was read at the annual meeting yesterday afternoon, stated that afternoon patrolling had been carried on since May, 1920. Several public parks had been patrolled. The Executive Committee had tried in vain to secure the appointment of two women keepers in St. Stephen's Green, and now they suggested that a small portion of the grounds should be set apart for children only. Mr. Charles Eason proposed that they should take over the work done in the past by the Irish Girls' Protection Crusade. Colonel Edgeworth Johnstone, C.B., Chief Commissioner, D.M.P., in seconding, said that he had made inquiries through the police with regard to young girls passing through the city. The reports were that there was nothing in the shape of a regular "white slave" traffic, although he supposed that there were individual instances. The proposal was adopted.

WOMEN'S TRAINING AND EMPLOYMENT.—A meeting of the Central Committee on Women's Training and Employment was held at 21 Parliament street on Friday. The following members attended:—Lady Arnott, and subsequently Mrs. Gaisford St. Lawrence, in the chair; Miss Cunningham, M.A.; Miss M. Hayden, M.A.; Miss Hutton, Mrs. M. Murphy, Miss Ryan, M.A., Chairman, Cork Interviewing Board; Miss White, LL.D.; Miss Whitty, the Hon. Mrs. Wynne, Chairman, Sligo Interviewing Board; Miss Haire-Forster. The following members were unavoidably absent:—The Countess of Fingall, President; Mrs. Macken, M.A.; Mrs. Greene. A report was presented showing that since the formation of the Committee in June, 1920, 786 applications for assistance in training had been received from girls and women, whose earning capacity or opportunities had been injuriously affected as a result of the war; 475 candidates had been interviewed; 301 applications had been recommended, and 259 grants had been made by the Committee. 134 candidates were actually in training, while 71 had finished training, and in many cases had obtained satisfactory posts.

POLICEMAN SHOT.—Constable M'Carthy, R.I.C., Baltinglass, Co. Wicklow, was shot and seriously wounded in the groin in the village street on Sunday night. He was on duty with two other members of the Constabulary, when two motor vans conveying excursionists from a handball match at Dunlavin drew up at a publichouse. The occupants jeered at the policemen, and when Constable M'Carthy turned to walk towards the vans he was immediately shot.

ULSTER.

A POLITICIAN SECRETARY.—Fermanagh County Council discussed yesterday a letter from the Local Government Board with regard to the appointment of Mr. Thomas Corrigan, the elected secretary, in which it was pointed out that Mr. Corrigan had taken a prominent part in politics, and had undergone imprisonment. The Board considered it of the utmost importance that a person holding the position of secretary to a County Council should not be identified with advanced political movements, especially in a Council where both parties are more or less evenly divided. Unless, therefore, he was prepared to cease to take an active part in politics and to confine himself to the discharge of his duties as secretary the Board could not regard him as a fit and proper person to hold the position of secretary. However, the Board decided to sanction Mr. Corrigan's appointment on probation up to March 31, 1922, and if at the end of the period he was found to have discharged his duties with efficiency and propriety it would be prepared to give favourable consideration to the question of his permanent appointment. By 14 votes to 11 a resolution was passed expressing surprise at the letter of the Local Government Board, and refusing to consent to the temporary arrangement.

APPEALS AND SUBSCRIPTIONS.

THE IRISH DISTRESSED LADIES' FUND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Will you kindly give me a little space in your paper to make my usual autumn appeal? Many people who sympathise with the old and poor are good enough to send me clothes for them. The winter is near, and warm garments are badly needed—more so this year than ever, as food is still very costly, and leaves a small margin (if any) for the purchase of clothes. I, therefore, hope for a good response to my appeal. Most especially useful are coats and skirts, waterproofs, and warm coats and wraps for old folk. Please send all parcels addressed to me at 20 Dawson street, Dublin.—Yours, etc.,

PLEDGE TO U.S. PRESIDENT.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON INCIDENT.

MR. HARVEY'S STORY OF THE PREMIER.

Speaking at a dinner given by the Pilgrims in London last night to the British delegates to the Washington Conference, the American Ambassador, Mr. Harvey, said that he could not allow the opportunity to pass without making on behalf of his country acknowledgment of the generous and characteristic promptness with which the Prime Minister had accorded his whole-hearted support to the initiative of the President of the United States.

He (Mr. Harvey) would never forget the peaceful Sunday afternoon in July when he found Mr. Lloyd George seated under the trees at his country place engaged in an animated conversation with the Premiers of the Dominions. Leaving the party, Mr. Lloyd George walked with him across the lawn, and motioned him to a rustic chair, he himself taking another. Quietly he asked, "What is it?"

"I drew a cablegram from my pocket," continued Mr. Harvey, "and held it towards him. 'Read it,' he said. I did so, slowly and carefully. Needless to inform you, it was a message from the Secretary of State announcing the intention of the President to summon the Conference of Nations.

"In a flash the Prime Minister was on his feet. 'We accept,' he almost shouted; 'we accept gladly, we accept gratefully. I do not need to read the telegram. It is all right. We will do everything in our power to make the Conference a great success.'

"That," Mr. Harvey added, "is the pledge which he gave, and that is the pledge which he has kept."

The Ambassador also paid a tribute to the Marquis Curzon, before whom he laid the official communication, and mentioned that when the Foreign Secretary had before him the draft of the conventional reply, beginning, "The British Government confirm their acceptance," he remarked, "This does not suffice," and in his own hand wrote in the sentence the words, "with the greatest satisfaction."

The attitude of France, Mr. Harvey proceeded, was no less reassuring, while yet more satisfying, if possible, for obvious reasons, was the response of the alert and progressive Empire of Japan. America's own position was plain. America's security did not rest on her physical resources alone. Her moral position was impregnable. Not only would she never seek additional territory by conquest: she would not accept it as a gift. Within her borders were unoccupied lands sufficient to sustain treble the present population. She could rest content, a friend of all nations, and without an enemy in the world.

After referring to the modifications in America's military and naval programmes as conclusive evidence of her confidence in the outcome of the Conference, the Ambassador appealed for unity between Great Britain and America, saying: "If we cannot act in unison now, there is slight hope that we ever shall."

WORLD'S DEBT TO PRESIDENT.

In a telegram, expressing deep disappointment at his inability to be present, Mr. Lloyd George said that he was hoping keenly to attend the Conference. For summoning it, he added, the world owes to President Harding a debt of sincerest gratitude, and we shall do our utmost to ensure its success.

Mr. Balfour said that the hopes of millions throughout the world were centred in that enterprise. One of the great group of problems which had to be dealt with was disarmament, and the President had been well advised to concentrate attention upon that.

LATE MR. FLORENCE P. KANE.

The remains of Mr. Florence P. Kane, of the Office of Public Works, and of Verona, Harold's Cross, were interred in Glasnevin Cemetery yesterday. The funeral was attended by a large number of the staff, with whom Mr. Kane was extremely popular, and also by a large circle of friends. The chief mourners were:—Thomas Kane (brother), S. Ward, and J. Dowling (brothers-in-law).

The prayers at the graveside were recited by the Rev. Father Kinsella and the Rev. Father Richards.

AMERICAN MARKETS.

STOCKS CLOSED WEAK.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.)

NEW YORK, Monday.

Stocks opened irregular. European and Domestic Oils and Equipments were absorbed, and Royal Dutch Petroleum gained 2 points on talk of a merger with the Union Oil Company. Then the market reacted, and Mexican Petroleum declined 6 points. There was liquidation and bear raids on Motors and Rubbers on further "cuts" in Tyre prices. Shippings were also heavy, and the weakness of influential shares and the late stiffness of money caused an increased bearish sentiment. The closing was weak.

CHICAGO, Monday.

WHEAT opened steady and unchanged to ⅛c. up, and further improved on bullish weekly world's shipments and commission house buying, then eased under larger country offerings, but again moved up on adverse North-West crop news, decreasing stocks, large seaboard clearances, the strength of cash and outside markets, foreign buying, and shorts covering. Finally, on bearish Winnipeg cables, large N.W. receipts, and a slow outside demand, the market closed barely steady, ⅛c. to ⅛c. lower. Spot inactive. No. 2 hard winter spot, nominal; ditto No. 3, nominal. October 106; December, 108; May, 112¼.

CORN opened steady and unchanged to ⅛c. dearer, and went higher on unfavourable weather and commission house buying, but declined under a slow cash demand, the fall in wheat, and liquidation; then again improved under covering on the bullish visible supply figures. FOUR WOMEN AND A ROPE.

MOUNTJOY ESCAPES.

Four female prisoners in Mountjoy Prison escaped on Sunday night. They were:—

Nurse Linda Kearns, sentenced to ten years' imprisonment, for having been in possession of arms in Co. Sligo;

Miss Aileen Keogh, sentenced to two years' imprisonment, with hard labour;

Miss May Burke, sentenced to two years' imprisonment, with hard labour; and Miss Eithne Coyle, sentenced to one year's imprisonment.

The escape was effected between 7 and 8 o'clock. It is stated that the prisoners received no help from the outside, but succeeded in eluding the wardresses and scaling the wall of the prison through their own efforts alone.

According to the meagre accounts given of the affair, the women made a rope ladder, and after the evening meal went quietly to the wall on the north side of the female exercise yard.

A ROPE LADDER.

On the other side of the wall is the canal bank. Over the wall they threw the ladder, and when they got it securely fixed they climbed on to the wall, and dropping the ladder on the other side reached the ground without mishap. They then walked away, and were soon received by friends in the city.

The prisoners were missed shortly afterwards, but by this time they had disappeared, and to search beyond the bounds of the prison would have been futile.

No particulars were issued by Dublin Castle yesterday, but it was intimated that the prisoners had escaped.

Up to last evening there had been no development in connection with the mysterious death of the 14-year-old girl, Kathleen Mansfield, whose body was found in a garden at Farnham, Surrey, on Sunday morning.

DUBLIN.

MARKETS BUSIER. BANK STOCK LOWER. GUINNESS AND TEXTILES BUSY AND HIGHER. OILS IMPROVE.

There was an encouraging change for the better in prices of many leading securities on 'Change yesterday, and altogether a much more satisfactory business was put through with a tendency to market strength in a few cases. Guinness and Coats Ord. were in brisk request and formed features. Important rallies took place in leading Oil shares on a further accession of strong support now that the forced selling pressure has relaxed. The Dunlop market was again quietly firm on the belief growing that the worst effects of the recent great slump in trade and prices has been reached if not passed, even though the effect of the depression has yet to be shown in the reports to be issued later on for the year's trade to 31st August last. The Funds fluctuated with Local Loans affected by the new issue. War Loan 4 p.c. was not so good, but War 5 p.c. was well held. FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

So the Soviet has announced its intention to recognise the State loans contracted by the Tsarist Government—on terms. This is not at all surprising after the recent decision not to abandon Capitalism altogether. The obligations of the former regime amount to a formidable sum, as the following shows:—Direct loans, £737,988,972; railway loans, £45,144,484; railway guarantees, £30,348,716; other loans, £121,387,688.

It becomes increasingly apparent that before very long industrial companies in many branches of business will have to submit their capital accounts to drastic reduction. The inflation of capital during the war and in the brief period of boom following the armistice led to the practice being expanded in a manner far beyond legitimate limits. Much of the money has gone. There is little chance of its being recovered. On some of the capital at present in existence all chance of earning even reasonable dividends for some time to come is virtually extinct. Sound business principles will compel application of the pruning knife all round. Shareholders may squirm, but they will bow to the inevitable, the less unwillingly if reorganisation does not involve putting up more money. A good many people are selling their shares even to-day lest companies may go into liquidation, and reconstruct on a basis that will include an assessment upon the present proprietors. The operation has to be undergone sooner or later in the case of many undertakings. As business retraces painful steps to more common, sensible levels of prices, the lopping down of unwieldy capital accounts must also be taken in hand. Prudent finance as well as the capacity for earning dividends will demand the removal of superfluous capital from balance sheets whose assets are no longer represented by it on the other side.

It is announced that letters of allotment in connection with the Pearson and Knowles Coal and Iron Company's issue of £100,000 7½ per cent. First Mortgage Debenture Stock at £97 per cent. have been posted.

The Stock Exchanges will be closed to-day.

A lady placed an order with a College Green broker yesterday for execution to-day, but she was informed that the Exchanges would be closed for the November holiday. She asked in all innocence "Are the members of the Stock Exchange all saints?"

According to the monthly statistics compiled by the Commercial Corporation of London, the total market valuation of the Ordinary stocks and shares of home industrial companies quoted in the Stock Exchange official list is now £252,735,602. This figure compares with £270,952,865 a month ago, and with £325,392,046 at the close of October a year ago. The corresponding figure at the close of June, 1914, was £158,030,959. The market premiums on these Home Industrial securities represented by the excess of the market price over the amount paid up is now 12.97 per cent., compared with a premium of 22.48 per cent. a month ago, a premium of 73.37 per cent. a year ago, and a premium of 73.21 per cent. at the end of June, 1914. The new capital offered for subscription by home industrial companies in the past month of October amounted to £7,456,707, there being 22 issues. The corresponding figures in September, 1921, were £2,587,099 with 10 issues, and in October, 1920, £14,101,479, with 35 issues. The issues of October, 1920, included £4,000,000 by Lever Brothers and £5,000,000 by explosive trades.

The directors of the Niger Co., Ltd., regret that, owing to the continued depression in trade, they do not feel justified in declaring a dividend on the 8 p.c. Cum. Pref. Shares at present. It will be recalled that in April last a similar announcement was made by the directors.

OIL REPORT.

Caltex Oil Company.—The Caltex Oil Company have received advice from Mexico that the production of their Camalote Well No. 1 for the month of September was 79,548 barrels, or 12,630 tons. The total production from this well up to September 30th is 902,300 barrels. The barrel is equivalent to 42 gallons, making the total production approximately 38 million gallons of crude oil.

Temiscouata Railway, September, gross $35,478, net $3,749; Great Southern of Spain Railway, for week to October 22, ps. 85,314, decrease ps. 6,707; Great Indian Peninsula, for week to October 22, Rs.22,60,800, decrease Rs.1,85,500; Barsi Light Railway, for period to October 8, Rs.16,300 decrease Rs.6,609.

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

So the Soviet has announced its intention to recognise the State loans contracted by the Tsarist Government—on terms. This is not at all surprising after the recent decision not to abandon Capitalism altogether. The obligations of the former regime amount to a formidable sum, as the following shows:—Direct loans, £737,988,972; railway loans, £45,144,484; railway guarantees, £20,348,716; other loans, £121,387,688.

It becomes increasingly apparent that before very long industrial companies in many branches of business will have to submit their capital accounts to drastic reduction. The inflation of capital during the war and in the brief period of boom following the armistice led to the practice being expanded in a manner far beyond legitimate limits. Much of the money has gone. There is little chance of its being recovered. On some of the capital at present in existence all chance of earning even reasonable dividends for some time to come is virtually extinct. Sound business principles will compel application of the pruning knife all round. Shareholders may squirm, but they will bow to the inevitable, the less unwillingly if reorganisation does not involve putting up more money. A good many people are selling their shares even to-day lest companies may go into liquidation, and reconstruct on a basis that will include an assessment upon the present proprietors. The operation has to be undergone sooner or later in the case of many undertakings. As business retraces painful steps to more common, sensible levels of prices, the lopping down of unwieldy capital accounts must also be taken in hand. Prudent finance as well as the capacity for earning dividends will demand the removal of superfluous capital from balance sheets whose assets are no longer represented by it on the other side.

It is announced that letters of allotment in connection with the Pearson and Knowles Coal and Iron Company's issue of £100,000 7½ per cent. First Mortgage Debenture Stock at £97 per cent. have been posted.

The Stock Exchanges will be closed to day.

A lady placed an order with a College Green broker yesterday for execution to-day, but she was informed that the Exchanges would be closed for the November holiday. She asked in all innocence: "Are the members of the Stock Exchange all saints?"

According to the monthly statistics compiled by the Commercial Corporation of London, the total market valuation of the Ordinary stocks and shares of home industrial companies quoted in the Stock Exchange official list is now £252,735,602. This figure compares with £270,952,865 a month ago, and with £325,392,046 at the close of October a year ago. The corresponding figure at the close of June, 1914, was £158,030,959. The market premiums on these Home Industrial securities represented by the excess of the market price over the amount paid up is now 12.97 per cent., compared with a premium of 22.48 per cent. a month ago, a premium of 73.37 per cent. a year ago, and a premium of 73.21 per cent. at the end of June, 1914. The new capital offered for subscription by home industrial companies in the past month of October amounted to £7,436,707, there being 22 issues. The corresponding figures in September, 1921, were £2,387,099 with 10 issues, and in October, 1920, £14,101,479, with 35 issues. The issues of October, 1920, included £4,000,000 by Lever Brothers and £3,000,000 by explosive trades.

The directors of the Niger Co., Ltd., regret that, owing to the continued depression in trade, they do not feel justified in declaring a dividend on the 8 p.c. Cum. Pref. Shares at present. It will be recalled that in April last a similar announcement was made by the directors.

OIL REPORT.

Caltex Oil Company.—The Caltex Oil Company have received advice from Mexico that the production of their Camalote Well No. 1 for the month of September was 79,548 barrels, or 12,630 tons. The total production from this well up to September 30th is 902,300 barrels. The barrel is equivalent to 42 gallons, making the total production approximately 38 million gallons of crude oil.

HOLIDAY STOCKS.

LOCAL LOAN "GOING QUITE NICELY."

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

Politics proved a negligible factor on the resumption of markets after the week-end, but the incidence of the new Local Loans issue, on the other hand, caused the gilt-edged group to become more or less idle, with quotations, where changed, on the easier side. Incidentally, the new issue was reported to be "going quite nicely," which is in accordance with the general anticipations. A feature in the House was the support accorded to Russian Government Stocks, all of which were marked up extensively on the Soviet Government's offer of conditional recognition of Russia's pre-war external debts. In a general way, business was dull, owing partly to the Paris Bourse being closed, while there was a tendency for commitments to be curtailed in view of the fact that the Stock Exchange itself is also not to open to-day. Consequently, the attendance of members was somewhat smaller than usual, several operators taking advantage of the opportunity afforded for an extended week-end holiday.

LONDON STOCKS BRIGHTER

THE RUSSIAN OFFER.

(FROM OUR FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

The London Stock markets were decidedly brighter yesterday, and it was thought that the improved tendency was due to some bear re-purchasing in anticipation of the House being closed to-day. The Russian Soviet statement with regard to pre-war Russian obligations aroused some little interest, but little was expected from the declaration. There was a slight improvement in Russian Fives, but all Russian prices are so hopeless that the change made little difference. Gilt-edged securities were dull. Consols fell ⅛ to 48⅞. The 3½ p.c. War Loan was ⅛ down at 90, and the 4 p.c. ⅛ at 97. Victory Bonds also declined ⅛ to 77⅞. Treasury Bonds were steady; India 3½ p.c. fell ¼ to 57.

Among FOREIGN GOVERNMENT SECURITIES there was a slight recovery in Russians. The 4 p.c. rose 1½ to 7½, and the 5 p.c. 2 to 9½. Brazilians were strong, the 4 p.c. and the Funding, 1908, each rising a point to 46 and 62 respectively. German Threes fell another ¼ to 2¾. French Loans were quiet, but unchanged. Mexicans were dull, and the 6 p.c. fell ½ to 50.

Among HOME RAILWAYS there was a recovery in Underground Elec. Income Bonds of 2 points to 69; otherwise the market was generally flat and lower. Great Northern Def. fell ½ to 21½, Great Central Def. ¼ to 3¾, and Great Eastern ¼ to 25. Chatham Ord. fell ¼ to 5¼.

Canadian Pacifics, among COLONIAL AND FOREIGN RAILWAYS, gained a point at 143. Grand Trunks were quiet, the only change being a fall of ½ in the 1st Pref. to 13½. Argentines were steady, the only change being an advance of ¼ in Westerns to 47¼ x.d. Argentine Great Western Ord., however, fell 2 to 29½. Armavir Touapse rose 3 points at 6½. Mexicans were dull, and the 8 p.c. Pref. fell 1 to 34. United of Havana also fell a point to 39.

OIL SHARES RISING.

ALTHOUGH NOT ACTIVE, LEADERS DISPLAY STRENGTH, AND FINISH AT THE BEST.

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

Cheerfulness characterised the Oil Share market yesterday, although not unnaturally, having regard to to-day's holiday and the fact that the Paris Bourse was closed, business was only on a moderate scale. Nevertheless, no pressure to sell was experienced in any direction. The continued strength of Royal Dutch in Amsterdam, and the favourable nature of week-end advices from New York, were encouraging factors, and led to a strong opening, with Royal Dutch shares taking the lead. Transactions, which were confined mainly to the leading counters, were for the most part small, and following the initial strength prices slipped back, owing to the quietness of the market. In the afternoon, however, a sharp rally occurred on Amsterdam buying of Royal Dutch and Shell shares, and the market as a whole improved in sympathy. In the "Street" the leaders were bid for, and added to their earlier gains, the firmness in the late dealings being due to buying on New York account. As mentioned above, Royal Dutch took the lead, and provided an outstanding feature of strength. From 36¾ the shares weakened to 36¼, but Amsterdam buying in the afternoon took them up again to 37, at which they left off rather buyers, the result of the day's business being an advance of 1¾. Shells made a good start at 4⅝, eased to 4½, and were then bid up to 4⅝, at which they left off in the "Street," showing a gain of ⅛. The Prefs. fell ⅛ to 8⅛. Mexican Eagles received a fair amount of attention, despite the fact that the Paris Bourse was closed, and after changing hands between 4⅜ and 4¼, finished at the former price, at which an advance of ⅛ was registered. The Prefs. were up to a like extent at 3⅝. Closing prices:—

INDUSTRIALS FIRM.

CHEERFUL CLOSE.

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

In view of the fact that the House will be closed to-day, very little business was passing in the Miscellaneous and Industrial Market yesterday. Most departments, however, presented a firm appearance, and at the close a feeling of cheerfulness was apparent.

Support was forthcoming for Cements, and the price finished 1s. higher on balance at 13s. 6d. British Portlands were maintained at 18s. 3d. x.d. Oil Cakes remained in the vicinity of 20s. 6d. most of the day, at which they finished, but Dunlops closed a little harder on the day at 7s 1½d. The statement by the directors of the Niger Company had little effect on the shares, which closed unaltered at 10s. 6d., after having marked 9s. 9d.; and Lever issues were maintained, the 7 p.c. ruling at 14s.3d. and the 8 p.c. at 14s. 6d. The forthcoming issue of Debentures by Benson and Hedges had a depressing effect on Tobaccos, B.A.T. losing 7½d. at 61s. 3d., and Imperials 9d. at 47s. 3d. Canadas fell to 17s. 6d. Forestals were better again at 19s. in the Land section, and Bays were maintained at 5⅝. Pekins rose to 8s. 6d. In the Banking section, Hong Kong and Shanghai rose a point to 99, and National Discount ¼ to 7¾, but National of Egypt lost ¼ at 18¼.

COURTAULDS FIRM.

Courtaulds rose 6d. to 31s. 9d. in the Textile section, and Cellulose issues were firmer, the Ord. rising 6d. to 4s. 6d., and the Pref. a like amount to 5s. 6d. Dyestuffs, however, were not so good, the Ord. and Pref. both losing ⅛ at ⅛ and ⅛, respectively. Van Den Berghs were a dull spot in the Foodstuff list, losing ⅛ at ⅞, and Maypoles eased slightly to 6s. 4½d. Liptons lost 3d. at 17s. 9d. J. Lyons were maintained at 2⅜. Breweries were steady, Watney Combe rising to 128½. Allsopp Ord., however, lost another point at 43½. Iron and Steels were fairly well maintained. Vickers kept the price at 11s., and the tax free Pref. remained at 12s. 3d.; and Armstrongs were maintained at 16s. J. Brown (fully paid) gained the turn at 18s. 3d., and B.S.A. were slightly lower at 7s. 6d. Chinese Engineering slipped back to 3⅞. In the Wireless section, Marconis showed firmness, rising ⅛ to 1⅜, Marines and Canadians gaining a few pence at 17s. and 4s. 9d., respectively.

MINING MARKET GOOD.

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

As was only to be expected, in view of to-day's holiday, business on the Stock Exchange was not very brisk yesterday, and the attendance of members was smaller than usual. Notwithstanding the limited trading, however, the tone all round kept very firm, and in the Mining market Kaffirs made quite a good display. Advices from the Cape were of a cheerful character, and prices were distinctly harder at the opening. When it was discovered that the lead thus given was not being followed here, an easier tendency prevailed, especially as Paris was making a long week-end holiday, the bourse being closed both yesterday and to-day. Also a set-back of 1d. to £5 4s. 9d. per oz. occurred in the price of gold. Despite these slightly adverse circumstances, most of the good class shares managed to retain some of their early improvement, and the tone at the close was quite steady. Central Mining were among the shares which finished higher, and Gedulds, Johnnies, the Randfonteins, Crown Deep, and several others added something to the previous quotations. The Union custodian is now on this side, and speculation is rife as to what, if any, arrangement will be arrived at with the Public Trustee for the disposal of ex-enemy shares. The Rhodesian department spent a very quiet time. Chartered moved aimlessly within very narrow limits, and a couple of other shares receded the turn, but otherwise there was hardly sufficient business passing to test prices. Closing prices:—

ABANDONED INFANT.

JUDGE'S WARNING.

Mr. Justice Samuels, at the Dublin Commission yesterday, declared that he could not impose a lighter sentence than six months' imprisonment on Sarah Daly and Elsie O'Keeffe, who pleaded guilty to abandoning an infant at Kingstown.

An appeal had been made by a lady probationer, who looked after the interests of young women in trouble, to treat the case as leniently as possible. He would not impose hard labour owing to the circumstances in which the defendants were situated. Of the two he thought Daly was the worst offender. He could understand the agony of mind of girls like O'Keeffe when they got into trouble, and he hoped that the terrible warning she had received would enable her to live an industrious life.

In the Divorce Court, London, yesterday, Mr. Cecil James Gordon Canning was granted a decree nisi on the ground of the misconduct of his wife (who, petitioner stated, was the daughter of Sir William Schooling), with Donald Castle.

THE MONEY MARKET.

LIGHTER SUPPLIES OF CAPITAL.

Daily loans have, perhaps, been rather less plentiful than they were during last week on the Money market, but in view of the heavy disbursements to-day in the form of interest payments, the largest of which is on the Funding Loan, it does not look as if supplies will be materially reduced. Advances over the night went on at 3 p.c. for renewals, and in many places balances were offering down to 1 p.c. Discount rates were firm, with little business. The banks bought a few November Treasuries at 3 p.c., but this seemed to be the only class of paper changing hands. Second-hand Treasuries were offering at 3⅜ p.c.

The price of gold was 1d. lower at 104s. 9d. per oz. fine. Bar silver fell ⅛d. for cash to 40⅜d. per oz. and ⅛d. for forward delivery to 39⅞d. per oz.

In foreign exchanges several of the Continental centres were closed yesterday, and will be to-day, and that was the main reason for the improvement shown in French francs and Italian lire. Paris cheque opened at 53.94, and came steadily downwards, showing at the close of public business an improvement of about 60 centimes on balance. The Italian rate had a net fall of over 4 lire to the £. At one time German marks were up to 720, and at the rate given below were 21½ marks to the £ cheaper compared with Saturday. New York moved in our favour. Norwegian kroner appreciated sharply.

PRODUCE AND FOOD.

CATTLE

BIRKENHEAD, Monday.—Trade was extremely slow for cattle at the Birkenhead lairages to-day, and only a very few stores were affected where business was done. Best bullocks and heifers made around 10½d., secondary qualities were a bad trade at correspondingly lower prices. The best sorts made 1/1 per lb., sinking the offal. At market—1,800 cattle and 2,482 lambs. At the dressed beef section trade was also slow, sides making from 8d. to 9d. per lb.

HULL, Monday.—Better supplies at increased prices. Best beef 16/- to 17/-, secondary 14/- to 15/-, cows 13/- per stone; young sheep 1/4, large 1/2, lambs 1/4, ewes 10d. to 1/- per lb; young pork 16/- to 18/-, large 12/- to 16/- per stone.

GLASGOW, Monday.—Hegarty and Kelly report Irish cattle a good show. Whilst top quality made recent rates, secondary sorts met a moderate inquiry, and less money had to be taken to effect a clearance.—(Advt.)

LIVERPOOL, Monday.—WHEAT—Cable advices from Winnipeg and Chicago were disappointing, and speculative positions of wheat here were easier at the outset, but, with sellers reserved, values afterwards recovered, and fluctuated according to offerings, finishing at a moderate loss on the day. C.i.f. parcels No. 1 Manitoba arrived and afloat sold at 50/6, and No. 2 hard winter October-November quoted 50/- per qr. MAIZE easier for speculative positions. C.i.f. parcels River Plate afloat quoted 31/- and mixed American November 28/6. Wheat on the spot ruled quietly steady. LIVERPOOL, Monday.—BACON—The market re-opens the week under the same conditions recently prevailing, advices from Chicago being again irregular, with live hogs lower, and counteracted by the absence of arrivals at this port to-day of American bacon. Holders consequently are steady, and ask late prices for all descriptions; while a fair demand continues to be experienced for clear bellies, heavy weights being very scarce, while Cumberlands are in modrate request, and long clears, with backs, attract more notice, but American Wiltshires slow of sale. HAMS firm, and in fair demand, chiefly for short cut, prices of which still tend against buyers. Shoulders quiet for New Yorks, though a moderate inquiry is reported for square; while picnics are scarce and wanted. Canadian Wiltshires move but moderately at late currencies. AMUSEMENTS IN DUBLIN.

GAIETY THEATRE.

"CARMEN."

The performance of "Carmen" given last night by the Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company, opening their second week of the Dublin season at the Gaiety Theatre, was one of the best things that they have done during their present visit, if, indeed, it does not rank as their best achievement. Orchestra, chorus, and principals, alike, combined happily in producing a satisfactory performance. Under the guidance of Mr. Cuthbert Hawley, the beauty of the music was fully presented, and the chorus showed a nice balance of tone. Miss Enid Cruickshank made an excellent Carmen, taking full advantage of the character to represent an attractive, wilful, and exasperating disposition. Her voice was always pleasant and expressive. Mr. Parry Jones sang well in the character of Don José; his voice was good and his acting capable. Miss Eda Bennie, as Micaela, displayed a nice quality of voice. Mr. William Michael took the part of Escamillo, and received the usual tribute on his singing of "The Toreador." Miss Kitty Adams and Miss Constance Newell sang in good style as Frasquita and Mercedes, while Mr. Harison Cook (Zuniga), Mr. Emile Vellen (Morales), Mr. Hindmarsh (Pastia), Mr. Baxter (Dancairo), and Mr. Brunton (Remendado) acquitted themselves capably.

This evening: "The Daughter of the Regiment."

THE THEATRE ROYAL.

Two full "houses" at the Theatre Royal last evening were kept in the best of good humour by a succession of competent merry-makers and entertainers. The Empire Operatic Quintette—Miss Hilda Mulligan, soprano; Miss Lily Augustus, contralto; Mr. Kenneth Sterne, tenor; Mr. Arthur Vallance, baritone, and Miss Daisy Morland at the piano—contributed a fine selection of operatic songs, which the audience warmly appreciated. They responded to a recall with the Soldiers' Chorus from "Faust," which was given with proper verve. Lily Lena, as a comedienne, was most successful, and her dainty style and pretty songs captivated her hearers. N. Carter Slaughter and his four colleagues presented an amusing farcical sketch, entitled "Too Many Wives." Tristram Wilberforce has lost his memory while on a holiday, and, as the result of this deficiency, many diverting incidents arise. Mick Newhouse and Audrey Merrill perform some daring and sensational feats on cycles, high and low, and thus get their share of the honours of the evening. Charles Kasrac and Miss Jordan Palmer do a good deal of agile stage work, which is highly amusing. Lola Patey, in song and stories; Jackson and Cawley, eccentrics; and Alf Sims, the elite comedian, gave satisfactory turns.

THE QUEEN'S THEATRE.

A thrilling detective drama, "The Face at the Window," occupies the boards in the Queen's Theatre this week. The play is by F. Brooke Warren, and is produced by Mr. Charles F. Wright, who has been fortunate in securing a particularly strong cast, which includes a number of popular artistes. Presented in no less than eight scenes, "The Face at the Window," at both performances last evening, was well received by large "houses." Incidents in the drama are many and varied, and there were numerous thrills which appealed to the audience. The piece was excellently staged, and the acting was admirable on the part of all concerned. Mr. Barrett McDonnell was in the rôle of the detective, a part he played very successfully, and he was supported in a creditable presentation by Miss Gertie Lena, Miss Evelyn Lund, Miss May Murnane, Messrs. Ira Allen, George Griffin, C. L. Keogh, H. J. Condron, Frank Lee, Arthur Wood, B. O'Sullivan F. Austin, G. Hillier, F. Arthurs, and J. T. Lockwood.

THE EMPIRE THEATRE.

Variety gives place this week to opera at the Empire Theatre, and the change was welcomed last night by a well-filled "house" at each performance. The Kingstown Grand Opera Company appeared in "The Lily of Killarney," which was nicely staged and carried through with fine spirit and excellent effect. Myles-Na-Coppaleen was represented by Mr. P. Kirwan, who appeared to have studied the character closely and invested it with a freshness which the audience thoroughly appreciated. As Eily O'Connor Miss Nellie Moore was natural and dignified, and Danny Mann was represented by Mr. J. Ryan, who sustained the rôle with noteworthy ability. Mr. W. H. Hobbs did justice to the character of Hardress Cregan, and Miss Maggie Grogan won the favour of the audience as Sheilah. The other members of the company played their respective parts effectively. "The Lily of Killarney" will be repeated to-night, and again on Thursday and Saturday. On Wednesday and Friday "The Bohemian Girl" will be staged.

THE TIVOLI THEATRE.

A programme of all-round merit is presented at the Tivoli Theatre this week, and last evening when it was introduced to large "houses" it met with a cordial reception. Bert and Gwen Emerson, described on the programme as the "vivacious and versatile pair," earned the title fully. Their "turn" was not marked by a dull moment. The Irish comedian and dancer, G. W. Fyvie, was welcomed as an old favourite. He sang a couple of songs in a characteristic manner, and at intervals danced, to the delight of all. With the aid of a few concertinas Jack Clevoner made his audience hear church bells, brass bands, bagpipes, and the "melodious" howls of a baby at 2 a.m. Charles Ancaster, a comedy juggler, performed a number of skilful tricks while performing playful antics round the stage. "Auntie" and her crazy cyclists gyrated round the stage on machines that seemed to have been invented during a bad nightmare. Tom Dewson sang a number of humorous songs, and the Coburn Duo, two little girls, sang and danced gracefully.

BICYCLE THIEF.

James Brown, who pleaded guilty to several charges of stealing bicycles, was put back for sentence by Mr. Justice Samuels at the Dublin Commission yesterday.

Mr. Carrigan, K.C., for the prosecution, asked for a severe punishment to put down a prevailing nuisance. In several cases Brown had stolen bicycles from poor workingmen, and then sold them to cycle agents. The prisoner, who was a clever rogue, either pawned or sold the bicycles.
